The Church Assembly is free to discuss any proposal concerning the Church of England, and to make provision in respect of such matters but where this includes Parliamentary sanction for any alteration contemplated this authority is to be sought in the manner prescribed by the Church of England Assembly (Powers) Act 1919 often referred to as the "Enabling Act". It is specially provided that any innovation touching doctrinal formulæ, or the services or ceremonies of the Church or the administration of the Sacraments or sacred rites thereof must be debated and voted upon by each of the three Houses sitting separately, and must then be either accepted or rejected by the Assembly in the terms in which it is finally proposed by the House of Bishops. It is further laid down that the Assembly or any of the three Houses may debate and formulate its judgment by resolution upon any matter concerning the Church, or otherwise of religious or public interest but the Assembly may not issue any statement purporting to define the doctrine of the Church on any question of theology. None of the powers belonging to the Convocations of Canterbury and York is to be diminished or derogated by the Assembly, which is also prohibited from exercising any power or performing any function distinctively belonging to the Bishops by right of their episcopal office.

Parochial affairs are managed by Parochial Church Meetings of parishioners who are members of the Church of England and by Church Councils elected by such meetings.

General Statistics.—The number of baptisms in 1930 was 430,621, the Easter communicants in the various English Dioceses numbered 2,401,635. The total gross income of 12,807 incumbents was £6 523,257, including £200,020 contributed as Easter offerings. The stipends of the assistant clergy were £1,008,939. The amount of voluntary parochial contributions in the 43 dioceses of England was £6,833,092.

By the Act of Union, 1800 the Church of Ireland was united with the Church of England the Sovereign, as one of its members being supreme governor on earth By the Act of 1869 this union was severed, and on Jan 1, 1871 the Church of Ireland resumed her independent position The Act of 1869 not only disestablished the Irish Church, but also took away her endowments nothing being left but the right to the life services of the annuitant Bishops and Clergy (the annuities provided were commuted for a capital sum) the right to claim churches in use for divine service, the right to buy the See and Glebe Houses (with garden and curtilage), and £500,000 in lieu of private endowments

The supreme governing body of the Church of Ireland is the General Synod, which meets annually

Subject to the General Synod are 20 Diocesan Synods which are assisted by smaller elected bodies called Diocesan Councils

The Bishop of the Diocese is chosen by the clerical and lay members of the Diocesan Synod The Primate is chosen by the House of Bishops from amongst their own number

The incumbent of the Parish is appointed by a Board of Nomination consisting of 7 persons viz —The Bishop 3 diocesan nominators (2 clerical and 1 lay) appointed by the Diocesan Synod, and 3 parochial nominators (lay) appointed by the registered vestrymen of the parish

The financial trustees of the Church are the Representative Body, composed of the Archbishops and Bishops, 13 clergymen and 26 laymen, chosen by the Diocesan Synods, with 13 co opted members (clerical or lay) This body holds the property of the Church, and administers its funds, subject to the General Synod

The first property it held was the capital sum £7 581 075 representing the life annuities of the Bishops and Clergy paid over as commutation money by the Church Commissioners and also £500,000 compensation for private endowments. The commutation capital on Dec 31, 1931 was only £13,961 15s 7*d*, charged with annuities to 4 annuitants The funds, however, in the custody of the Representative Body amounted in all to £10,927,366 made up of Commutation £13,961, Private Endowments £341,736, Parochial Sustentation £7 139 157, Episcopal Sustentation £572 087, General Synod Funds £713,495, and Miscellaneous purposes £2,146,930

Since 1869 members of the Church have paid in to the Representative Body a total sum of £10 884 318 The interest of the Diocesan and Parochial Sustentation and other Funds is approximately £369 676 The total amount of assessment for stipend paid by parishes 1931, was £106,047, and the total amount paid for stipends under Diocesan Schemes was £340 264.

THE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND

THE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND is Presbyterian in constitution and is governed by Kirk Sessions Presbyteries Synods and the General Assembly which consists of both clerical and lay representatives from each of the Presbyteries It is presided over by a Moderator (chosen annually by the Assembly) to whom His Majesty the King has granted precedence in Scotland during his term of office next after the Lord Chancellor of Great Britain The Sovereign is represented by a Lord High Commissioner (appointed each year by the Crown) who receives the sum of £2 000 towards his expenses The country for Church purposes was prior to the union of the Church of Scotland with the United Free Church of Scotland which was effected at a joint meeting of the General Assemblies of both Churches held on October 2 1929 in the presence of H R H the Duke of York as Lord High Commissioner divided into 16 Synods and 84 Presbyteries and there were about 1 800 ministers and licentiates engaged in ministerial and other work The number of communicants on the roll (Dec 31 1928) was 759,797 The sum of £809 865 3*s* 3*d* was (apart from Seat Rents levied by Church Authority and amounting to £73 371 6*s* 7*d*.) but including legacies amounting to £45 230 6*s* 9*d* raised in 1928 for church and missionary purposes Within the last 80 years considerably over 500 chapels at a cost for stipends and supplementary endowments of over £2 450 000 have been endowed and erected into parishes quoad sacra The parish churches numbered 1 470 There were in addition 245 chapels and mission stations in all of which worship is regularly conducted The figures applicable to the Church of Scotland as now re united after 86 years of separation are only partly available —

Congregations 2 920 Total membership 1 280 620 Sunday Schools 3 758 with 369 115 scholars and 47 795 teachers In 20 Foreign Mission fields there are 581 European Mission Agents (and in addition 195 missionaries wives many of whom are doing mission work in the various fields) and 7 807 native agents evangelists and teachers including in both cases those of the Women's Foreign Mission

Until 1560 the Church of Scotland was Roman Catholic but in that year the Scots Parliament abolished the jurisdiction of the Pope proscribed the Mass and ratified a Confession of Faith drawn up by John Knox and other divines In it all essential articles of the ancient creeds of the Church were adhered to Ceremonies were declared to be temporary in their nature and should be altered when they began to foster superstition Presbytery was settled in 1590 The restoration of the rights of the Bishops, civil and ecclesiastical was however, sanctioned by the General Assembly of 1610, and three Scottish Bishops were in that year consecrated in London Further innovations by King James VI alarmed the people and the attempt of Charles I to impose on the Church a Book of Canons and a Liturgy was met by the National Covenant and the restoration of Presbyterian forms which culminated in the Westminster Confession of Faith in 1646 At the Restoration the Church again became Episcopal but in 1690 the Scottish Parliament re established Presbyterianism By the Treaty of Union between England and Scotland (ratified by the English Parliament 6 Anne c 11) the Church of Scotland was secured in its Presbyterian form of government and the very first official act of a sovereign of the British Empire on his accession is to take an oath to maintain inviolably this settlement In 1921 Parliament passed the Church of Scotland Act 1921 to declare the lawfulness of certain Articles declaratory of the constitution of the Church of Scotland These Articles were framed with a view to facilitating union among Presbyterian Churches in Scotland A committee appointed by the Secretary for Scotland (under the Presidency of the late Viscount Haldane) enquired into the question of endowments, following upon which the Church of Scotland (Property and Endowments Bill) was introduced and was passed into law (15 and 16 Geo V c 33) in 1925 The primary purpose of this legislative measure was to transfer to and vest in the Church of Scotland General Trustees incorporated under the Church of Scotland (General Trustees) Order Confirmation Act 1921 the whole properties and endowments belonging to the Church as it then existed for behoof the latter

UNDER the general designation of METHODISTS are included all those religious bodies which owe their existence directly or indirectly to the efforts of the Revd John Wesley (born June 17, 1703 died March 2 1791) and his brother Revd Charles Wesley (born Dec 18, 1707, died March 29 1788)

A scheme for the reunion of the Wesleyan Methodists the Primitive Methodists and the United Methodist Churches was approved by all three Conferences and an Enabling Bill was passed by both Houses of Parliament and received the Royal Assent The final vote on Union (that is the final vote prior to that of the Uniting Conference) was taken by the three Conferences in 1931 the majority of 75 per cent being requisite in each case This vote took effect in 1932, the Uniting Conference meeting subsequently to the meeting of the several Conferences The first United Conference will meet in 1933

President (1932 1933), Rev John Scott Lidgett, D D

Secretary of the Conference, Rev Robert Bond

Wesleyan Methodists, the original body founded in 1739 by the two brothers The first Conference, consisting of six clergymen and four laymen was held in 1744 Since then the growth of Methodism has been great, its present adherents being given as 32 000,000 The latest statistics of Methodism throughout the world (1931) are Ministers, 60 217 local preachers 82 542 members and probationers 10 028,547 Sunday schools, 92,608, officers and teachers 961 337 scholars 9,949 543 churches and other preaching places, 108,828 The conference is now composed in its Representative Session of 300 ministers and 300 laymen, with a ministerial president and secretary at its head, elected year by year The Wesleyans are governed primarily by the Conference, secondarily by the Synods, which are semi annual meetings of the ministers and selected laymen in each district, over which a chairman is appointed by the Conference and thirdly by quarterly meetings of the ministers and lay officers of each circuit The authority of both these last meetings is subordinate to the Conference, which has the supreme legislative and judicial power in Methodism

The Primitive Methodists, who sprang up in Staffordshire, in 1810 under the leadership of Hugh Bourne and William Clowes Owing to the excesses attending certain outdoor services called 'camp meetings the Wesleyan Conference prohibited the continuance of the practice Bourne and Clowes refused to comply with this decision and were in consequence expelled They and their sympathisers banded together in a new body, with enlarged powers for the laity Next to the Wesleyans they are the most numerous and the most democratic of all the denominations which have arisen out of the Methodist movement

The United Methodist Church was formed by the Union in 1907 of three denominations of Methodists which hitherto had been separate from and independent of each other These were —

The Methodist New Connexion which owed its origin in 1797 to the Rev Alexander Kilham one of the early itinerating Wesleyan preachers He demanded that the members of the societies and not the Conference should be constituted the source of all power in Methodism and that the Conference should consist of lay as well as ministerial members all of whom should be elected by the members of the various societies as their delegates He was expelled by the Conference, and at once founded a new community

The Bible Christians founded in 1815 by Wm O Bryan a Wesleyan lay preacher in Cornwall They existed mainly in the West of England

The United Methodist Free Churches, which was itself an amalgamation of three different secessions—the Protestant Methodists formed in 1828 the Wesleyan Methodist Association which sprang out of a controversy in 1834 concerning the need for a trained ministry and the Wesleyan Reform Association founded in 1849 during a great agitation A strong opposition to the leading Wesleyan officials was organised, which found expression in Conference debates, but more strongly in anonymous and bitter pamphlets which were widely circulated On suspicion of being the authors and circulators of these pamphlets three ministers were expelled They found so many sympathisers that over 100 000 members seceded to found a new denomination The act of union of these three denominations into one took place in London on September 17 1907, when the first united Conference was held

INDEPENDENT METHODISTS

Independent Methodists.—This body is Congregational in its organisation with an unpaid Ministry Its first Conference was held in 1805

WESLEYAN REFORM UNION

This Union is Methodist in doctrine, Congregational in government, with if any church desires it a paid ministry It is the remnant of the original Reformers expelled from Wesleyan Methodism in 1849 The adherents are mainly in the Midland counties —President and General Secretary (1932 33) Rev G A Metcalfe Wesleyan Reform Book Room, 25 Change Alley Sheffield Educational Statistics.

I.—Elementary

Statutes require parents in England and Wales to cause their children to receive efficient elementary instruction or to attend school from 5 to 14 years of age, in Scotland, to provide efficient education up to 15 years, in Ireland to cause their children to attend school from 6 to 14 years

In England and Wales (1929) there were 20 791 public elementary schools with accommodation for 7,109,381 pupils, and average attendance of 4,915 336; in addition, there were 127 special schools for blind and deaf children, with accommodation for 9,284, and 463 for defective and epileptic children, with accommodation for 40,303 There were (1929) 33 698 certificated college trained men teachers and 64 068 women 5,542 certificated not college trained men teachers and 20,053 women, and 2 048 uncertificated men and 29,941 uncertificated women

In Scotland (1929) there were 2,915 primary schools with accommodation for 861 585, and average attendance of 584,473 There were (1929) 3,916 certificated men teachers and 15,128 women teachers, and 34 provisionally certificated women

Elementary school education includes teaching in practical matters—needlework, drawing gardening, handicrafts, cookery, &c—and the sections upon health, medical attendance, physical training, evening play centres, home study, future employment, &c, show that the schools are valuable agencies in child welfare generally

II.—Education Beyond Elementary

Secondary

The aims, methods, and institutions are in marked contrast to the comparative simplicity of those in Elementary Education In all the four countries it is now felt that although technical instruction was the first branch to be promoted by statute undifferentiated 4 year secondary (intermediate) courses should be gone through before pupils proceed to specialisation for industrial, commercial, &c, employments

In England and Wales (1929) the number of Secondary schools recognised for grant was 1 341, with 10 249 full time men and 10 265 full time women teachers The Authorities aim at securing graduate teachers as far as possible The full time pupils numbered 48 279 boys and 46,271 girls under 12, 140,844 boys and 119,395 girls between 12 and 16 19,815 boys and 15 581 girls over 16—a total of 209 938 boys and 184,247 girls Of these about one fourth come up from elementary schools with "free places," others with scholarships Nine tenths of these schools receive State grants, and nearly one third are controlled by Local Authorities Fees are charged to most of the pupils Of these 'efficient' schools about 40 per cent receive boarders (about 27 000) in varying proportions and drawn in many cases from distant areas Most of them are endowed or under trusts, and their trust incomes and property form a considerable asset in secondary school finance The system in Wales is much the same as in England, though the schools are under earlier statutory provisions, and are called 'Intermediate' in many cases. In Wales there is a Central Welsh Board

In Scotland there are Preparatory and Secondary Departments under the same Commissioners and Local Authorities as the Elementary schools In 1929 there were 207 Preparatory Departments with 76,091 children on the Register and average attendances of 66,347, and 252 Secondary Departments with 75,231 children on the Register and average attendances of 73 152 The Authorities aim at securing honours graduates as far as possible, and all teachers are certificated

Technical

Technical Education in England and Wales is provided in Evening and similar schools and in Day Technical Classes and Technical Institution Courses (mostly controlled by Local Authorities) State grants are paid on the number of students, of whom about one half are under 17 years of age The average attendance of a student is about 50 hours per annum There are also Teachers Courses, Tutorial Classes, and also Schools of Art, Branch Schools of Art, and Art Classes In Scotland Technical Education is provided in like manner

Training

Training is provided by the State for Elementary School Teachers, of whom 50 per cent have been trained in Colleges having nearly 13 000 places Slight progress has been made lately towards providing for the Training of Teachers for Secondary Schools, a small annual State grant being made for the purpose, in Scotland all candidates for employment as teachers must undertake a course of training of at least one year in teaching

Universities

Many of these institutions now receive annual State grants mainly in the form of "block" grants paid by the Treasury on the advice of the University Grants Committee Substantial grants are also received from local Education Authorities in England and Wales State grants to Irish Institutions were transferred from the Treasury to the Irish Governments as from April, 1922

In 1930 31 the Professors and Undergraduates were approximately as under:—

Universities	Professors, &c.	Undergraduates
England (11)	3 900	34,960
Wales (1)	375	3,070
Scotland (4)	939	11,650

THE UNIVERSITY OF LONDON,

South Kensington, S W 7. 1836, 1900 and 1929,

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON'S BUILDING SCHEME

In 1920 the University of London, with the assistance of a gift of £400,000 from the Rockefeller Foundation of America and a grant from H M Treasury, purchased a site in Bloomsbury immediately to the north of the British Museum, upon which to erect a group of buildings which would form the headquarters of the University. The site, which is rectangular in shape and has an area of about 10½ acres is bounded on the west by Malet Street on the east by Russell Square and Woburn Square, on the north by Byng Place and on the south by Montagu Place (with the British Museum on the other side of the road)

Before the war efforts were made to acquire this site, a considerable sum of money being raised for the purpose but for various reasons the scheme fell through and no further action was taken until 1920 when H M Government bought the site and offered it to the University subject to the condition that King's College should vacate its present buildings in the Strand, the greater part of which are held on a Crown lease at a nominal rent The authorities of King's College were unable to agree to this proposal, and, since the condition could not be fulfilled, the offer lapsed and the site was resold to the vendor by the Government The purchase of the site by the University in 1927 was free from any such condition.

Since its acquisition, the problem of the development of the site for University purposes has been worked out stage by stage With the assistance of the London County Council, parliamentary powers were obtained in 1928 for the closing of certain roadways which crossed the site, so as to secure a self contained estate for the central University area With a view to avoiding inconvenience to the public and the congestion of thoroughfares the stipulation was made that before these powers were exercised certain of the roads surrounding the site should be widened and the cost borne by the University. The condition having been fulfilled, permission was given in February 1932 by the Minister of Transport with the concurrence of the London County Council and the Holborn Borough Council to the enclosing of the southern portion of the site. This was completed in the early part of 1932.

The buildings to be erected on the site will be mainly for various central institutions and activities for which inadequate or no accommodation exists at present. These include the University Library, the newly established Courtauld Institute of Art, the Institute of Historical Research and the Institute of Education. Suitable quarters will be provided for the central administrative staff, and it is hoped that it will also be possible to erect a large ceremonial hall and an adequate building for the University Union. Certain other institutions, notably the Birkbeck College and the School of Oriental Studies, have been included provisionally in the building programme. With probably one or two exceptions it is not proposed to transfer to the site any of the Colleges of the University, in which the greater part of the teaching work of the University is conducted. The aim is to establish a centre for the University system which extends over the whole of London.

In the preliminary consideration of the question of development the University had the assistance of Mr. H. V. Lanchester, F.R.I.B.A., who acted as consultant architect from 1929 to 1931. In June 1931, Mr. Charles Holden, F.R.I.B.A. was appointed Architect for all the buildings to be erected. Although the scheme will have to be carried out in stages Mr. Holden's first task has been the preparation of a general design for the whole site. It was requisite that any such design should have regard to the immediate and future needs of the University that it should preserve on the site at least as much open space as now exists, and that its scheme of buildings should not be out of harmony with other buildings adjoining the site. This task Mr. Holden has accomplished and his design has been generally approved by the Court and Senate.

Towards the cost of building developments capital grants to an amount of £450,000 have been voted by the London County Council, the Corporation of the City of London have, subject to certain conditions, made a grant of £100,000 towards the cost of the Ceremonial Hall, whilst the Goldsmiths' Company have offered also conditionally £50,000 towards the cost of erecting and equipping the building of the University Library. Mr. Samuel Courtauld has generously provided for the cost of the building for the Courtauld Institute of Art, and the Czech-Slovak Government have promised a substantial sum for a permanent home for the Institute of Slavonic Studies.

DISTANCE OF THE HORIZON

THE limit of distance to which one can see varies with the height of the spectator The greatest distance at which an object on the surface of the sea or of a level plain can be seen by a person whose eyes are at a height of 5 feet from the same level is nearly 3 miles At a height of 20 feet the range is increased to nearly 6 miles and an approximate rule for finding the range of vision for small heights is to increase the square root of the number of feet that the eye is above the level surface by a third of itself the result being the distance of the horizon in miles but is slightly in excess of that in the table below which is computed by a more precise formula The table may be used conversely to show the distance of an object of given height that is just visible from a point in the surface of the earth or sea Refraction is taken into account both in the approximate rule and in the table

Headmasters' Conference Schools.

THE HEADMASTERS CONFERENCE.—Chairman (1932) F. B. Malim (Wellington). Secy. W. A. Bulkeley Evans, C.B.E., M.D., 5 Paper Buildings, Temple, E.C. 4. The Headmasters' Conference was founded in 1869 and incorporated in 1909. The object of the Conference is the discussion of educational questions which affect such schools as are in close connexion with the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge. In considering what Schools shall be included in the List or removed from it the Committee will have regard to the Governing Scheme or other Instrument under which the School is administered and if the School is maintained or aided by a Local Education Authority (a) how the Governing Body is constituted (b) to what extent by right or in practice the Governing Body acts independently of the Local Education Authority in directing general policy or administering disposable funds to the numbers in the School and in the case of Schools in Great Britain and Ireland the number of resident Undergraduates of Oxford and Cambridge educated at the School. The Committee may also take into account the proportion of boys in the School who having passed the School Certificate or other equivalent Examination, are continuing their studies beyond that stage. The annual meetings are as a rule held in December alternately (a) at some school represented on the Conference (b) at London or some University town.

NOTES.—(a) Annual Fees represent the average amount payable annually, exclusive of fees for extra subjects. The accepted practice is for a term's notice to be given before a boy is withdrawn. In lieu of term's fee is usually payable if a withdrawal takes place without notice.

(b) 'Headmaster.' In certain Schools other titles prevail e.g. Lieutenant-Rector, Belfast Academical Institution; Dulwich, Master; Edinburgh Academy, Rector; Glenalmond, Warden; Haileybury, Master; King William's College, Isle of Man, Principal; Liverpool College, Principal; Magdalen College School, Master; Manchester Grammar School, High Master; Marlborough, Master; Radley, Warden; St. Columba, Dublin, Warden; St. Edward's, Oxford, Warden; St. Paul's, High Master; Stonyhurst, Rector; Victoria College, Jersey, Principal; Wellington, Master.

THE BOYS' BRIGADE (Incorporated)

The senior boys' organisation founded in 1883 by the late Sir William A. Smith. The object of the Brigade is attained by a combination of disciplined and religious training. Every Company is connected with a Church or other Christian body. The total strength is over 100 000 officers and boys with 50 000 juniors in The Life Boys.—Abbey House, Westminster, S.W. 1.

CHURCH LADS' BRIGADE

An organisation especially valuable for helping a parish to keep the elder lads to their religious duties. Was founded in 1891 and combines a military method with moral and religious instruction. It is estimated that 1,000 000 lads have had the advantage of the Brigade's training, and to-day there are over one thousand Companies throughout the Empire with upwards of 60 000 lads.—Headquarters, Aldwych House, Catherine Street, W.C. 2. H.Q. Staff Chaplain and Secretary, Rev. C. M. Armitage, M.A.

THE BROTHERHOOD

THE BROTHERHOOD MOVEMENT "to lead men and women into the Kingdom of God, to unite in Brotherhood of mutual help to win the masses of the people for Jesus Christ, and to encourage the study of social service," may be said to have been founded in 1875 as the outcome of the Pleasant Sunday Afternoon movement initiated by John Blackham of West Bromwich. The movement is non political and unsectarian, and connected with it are other societies—Sisterhoods, P.S.A., Bible Classes, &c. President, W. H. Bolton. General Secretary, Rev. J. W. Tuffley. Headquarters, 37 Norfolk Street, Strand, W.C. 2.

Secondary Schools.

A Secondary School, as defined by the Board of Education, is a school for pupils who intend to remain for at least four years, and up to at least the age of 16. It must provide a progressive course of general education of a kind and amount suited to an age range at least from 12 to 17. The Board of Education issues annually a list of Secondary Schools recognized by the Board of Education as efficient with the full official name of the school, the place where it is situated, the date of recognition, the fees payable and (in many cases) the examinations taken. A similar list is published for Wales and (with less detail) for Scotland. The list in the case of England and Wales alone, occupies over 130 pages.

THE UNION JACK CLUB,

Waterloo Road, S.E 1. Tel. : Hop. 3521.

Patron-in-Chief. His Majesty the King.
Patroness-in-Chief: Her Majesty the Queen.
Patrons: H.R.H. The Prince of Wales, K.G.; H.R.H. The Duke of Connaught, K.G.

President: Sir Walter R. Lawrence, Bt., G.C.I.E., G.C.V.O., C.B.
Vice-President: Colonel Sir Henry Streatfeild, G.C.V.O., C.B., C.M.G.
Hon. Treasurer The Marquess of Cambridge, K.C.V.O.
Comptroller of Club: Vice Admiral E. Wigram, C.M.G., D.S.O.

This is one of our great National Institutions, where Sailors, Soldiers and Airmen can go when on leave or passing through London; a place where they may obtain at moderate charges good meals and comfortable bedrooms and where they find the usual amenities of a club, including Library and Writing Room, Billiard Room, Baths, Barber's Shop, and also a Club Shop in which articles of everyday use and almost everything that Service men require may be purchased. The Club is open throughout the day and night.

The Union Jack Club was erected by public subscription as a National Memorial to those who had fallen in the South African War, and other campaigns, and was opened on July 1st, 1907, by His late Majesty King Edward VII. Membership is open to those below the rank of Officer who are serving on the Active List of the Regular Forces, honorary membership being extended to the Colonial Permanent Forces and to the Navies, Armies and Air Forces of Foreign Powers visiting England. A limited number of ex-Service Warrant Officers, Petty Officers, N.C. officers and men may also be elected members of the Club.

The Club is managed by a Council and a General Committee, which includes representatives of the members.

A considerable extension of the Club with funds raised in all parts of the Empire to commemorate the services of our gallant fighting forces in the Great War of 1914–18 and to provide increased accommodation was completed in 1923.

Since 1926 the Council has been enabled, through the anonymous gift of one of its members, still further to enlarge the premises, bringing the number of beds available to 816, as against the original 208 when the Club opened.

THE UNION JACK HOSTEL,

Exton Street, Waterloo Road, S.E. 1.

Tel. : Hop. 2724. Opened June, 1913.

Patron-in-Chief: His Majesty the King.
Patroness-in-Chief: Her Majesty the Queen
Patron: H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, K.G.

President: Brig.-General Sir Frederick Gascoigne, K.C.V.O., C.M.G., D.S.O.
Vice-President: Sir Herbert J. Creedy, K.C.B., K.C.V.O.
Hon. Treasurer: The Marquess of Cambridge, K.C.V.O.
Secretary: J. R. Hayward, M.B.E.
Warden. Miss B. R. Morris.

The Hostel provides lodging and accommodation for the wives and children (with or without their husbands and fathers) of members and ex-members of the Naval and Military Forces of the Crown, below the rank of Officer. It is managed by a Council, and though run closely in connexion with the Union Jack Club, the organisation and finances of the two institutions are quite separate from one another.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

THE SALVATION ARMY was founded by General William Booth (b. 1829, d. 1912). In Dec., 1931, the number of Officers, Cadets and Employés was 35,882, of Corps and Outposts, 15,467, Local Officers (unpaid) 119,142. The number of countries occupied was 84, and of languages used 75. Connected with the Salvation Army are 1,599 philanthropic institutions, including 324 Industrial Homes, 91 Maternity Homes and 104 Children's Homes, 169 Slum Posts, 15 Prison-Gate Homes, 397 Shelters and Cheap Food Depôts for the Homeless, 129 Labour Bureaux, 12 Farms, &c., 973 Industrial and Day Schools. The total raised in the British Isles during "Self-Denial Week" in 1932 amounted to £148,210 16s. Balance-sheets and statements of account relating to the General Funds or to the Social Funds can be obtained, post free, from 101 Queen Victoria Street, E.C. 4.—GENERAL, Edward J. Higgins (1929), Queen Victoria Street, London, E.C. 4.

GIRLS' LIFE BRIGADE (Inc.).

An organisation founded by the National Sunday School Union in 1902, with the supreme purpose of keeping girls in close touch with the Church and Sunday School, and of training them for useful and noble Christian womanhood. Its four-fold programme covers every phase of a girl's life: Spiritual, Physical, Educational and Social. This interdenominational-temperance Movement has an international membership which is rapidly increasing.—Headquarters, 56 Old Bailey, London, E.C. 4.

LONDON FEDERATION OF BOYS' CLUBS

Incorporated. (FOUNDED in 1887.)

Patron: H.R.H. Prince Arthur of Connaught, K.G.
President: The Right Hon. The Lord Desborough, K.G.

The objects of the Federation are: (a) To consolidate and extend the important work of Boys' Clubs in London. (b) To promote competitions and friendly intercourse between the members of affiliated clubs. (c) To promote opportunities for those interested in the management of London Working Boys' Clubs to interchange opinions as to the best way of conducting them. There are now 150 Clubs affiliated—the total membership of these clubs, of boys between 14 and 18, amounting to approximately 14,000. The Federation is almost entirely dependent upon voluntary subscriptions, although a certain amount of support is obtained from affiliated Clubs by means of registration fees and entrance fees for competitions.

LIGHTING UP TIME

By the Road Transport Lighting Act 1927 (17 and 18 Geo 5 ch 37) every vehicle on any road shall during the hours of darkness carry—

(a) two lamps each showing to the front a white light visible from a reasonable distance

(b) one lamp showing to the rear a red light visible from a reasonable distance and every such lamp shall while the vehicle is on any road during such hours as aforesaid be kept properly trimmed lighted and in efficient condition, and shall be attached to the vehicle in such position and manner as the Minister (of Transport) may by regulations prescribe

It shall be the duty of any person who causes or permits a vehicle to be on any road during the hours of darkness to provide the vehicle with lamps in accordance with the requirements of this Act and of any regulations made thereunder (Sec 1 (1))

(Regulations have been made and are contained in S R. & O No 723 of 1929)

Whole or partial exemption may be given to vehicles used for naval military or air force purposes (Sec 1 (3) (b)) vehicles carrying inflammable or explosive goods of a nature specified in the regulations vehicles when standing on places specially set aside for the purpose vehicles drawn or propelled by hand, save as provided (Sec 1(2))

The Minister may by regulation require or permit, on conditions distinctive lamps to be carried displaying coloured lights on vehicles used as Hackney Carriages or public service vehicles or vehicles used for naval, military, or air force or police purposes, or as ambulances

The "hours of darkness" are defined thus —

(a) As respects the period of summer time, the time between one hour after sunset and one hour before sunrise

(b) As respects the remainder of the year the time between half an hour after sunset and half an hour before sunrise

Bicycles (pedal and mechanical solo), pedal tricycles and invalid carriages require a single white light to the front

Pedal bicycles and tricycles need not show a red light to the rear if they have attached an unobscured and efficient red reflector

Pedal bicycles and tricycles and solo motor cycles need not carry a lamp if being wheeled by a person on foot as near as possible to the near or left hand edge of the carriage way

Horse drawn vehicles—A separate lamp showing a red light to the rear shall not be required to be carried if the lamps showing a light to the front also show a red light to the rear visible from a reasonable distance and no part of the vehicle or load extends more than 6 feet behind such lamps

Any vehicle carrying a load overhanging laterally more than 12 inches from the centre of the nearest side lamp must have either an additional lamp on the side where the load overhangs or the position of the one lamp must be such that no part of the load projects outwards more than 12 inches beyond a vertical line drawn through the centre of the substituted or additional lamp

On any vehicle carrying a load more than 6 feet behind any lamp showing a red light to the rear carried in accordance with the Act an additional or substituted lamp shall be carried so that such load shall not project more than 6 feet beyond such additional or substituted lamp

Certain vehicles engaged in agriculture are exempt from carrying lamps

ON TOW

There are special provisions as to vehicles towing and being towed A lamp showing a red light need not be carried by the drawing vehicle, no lamp showing a light to the front need be carried on any vehicle being drawn a lamp showing a red light need not be carried on any vehicle being drawn except the rearmost vehicle Provided—if the distance between any such vehicles exceeds 5 feet each vehicle shall be required to carry the same lamps as if it were not a drawing vehicle or a vehicle being drawn, and if a drawn vehicle carries a load that projects laterally more than 12 inches beyond the outer most of the lamps showing a white light to the front an additional lamp shall be carried on the projecting load so that no part projects more than 12 inches beyond a vertical line through the centre of such lamp

INSIDE LIGHTING

Public Service Vehicles must, in compliance with the requirements of The Public Service Vehicles (Conditions of Fitness) and (Equipment and Use) Provisional Regulations 1931, be adequately lighted inside, and in the case of double decked vehicles fitted with a permanent top, also lighted outside at all times during the hours of darkness when carrying passengers

ANNUAL PREMIUMS FOR WHOLE LIFE ASSURANCE.

Life assurance may be effected either with or without participation in profits. If without participation, both sum assured and premium remain unchanged. If with participation, a higher premium is charged, and bonuses can either be payable with the sum assured, applied to reduce the premium, or surrendered for cash. An alternative plan is available in some offices whereby future bonuses are anticipated and used to reduce premiums from the outset. This is called the "Discounted Bonus" or "Cost Price" system. If the bonuses actually declared exceed those anticipated, the difference is credited to the policyholder; if, however, the anticipated bonuses exceed those declared, the balance has to be liquidated by the policyholder or remains as a debt. Policies should only be effected on this system in companies which can point to good and consistent bonus records, and whose valuation reserves are particularly strong.

The ages applicable to the life and endowment assurance (but not the annuity) rates as hereafter given are "next birthday" unless otherwise stated.

The next table shows the annual premiums payable throughout life for a policy of £100 payable at death, with profits. It is not sufficient to judge a life office by premium rates only. An office charging a high premium may give higher bonuses than one charging a low premium, and therefore bonus results and prospects as well as premiums have to be considered. Some offices only allow bonuses to be taken in reduction of premium, and on this plan the rates are usually high to commence with, but are greatly reduced after a few years. Some reserve bonuses for the older classes of policyholders, and in these cases lower premiums than the average are usually charged. Most offices grant interim bonuses between valuation periods, and it is important to ascertain if this is the case before an assurance is effected, and how such interim bonuses compare with valuation bonuses, especially in cases of endowment assurance.

† Offices thus marked have a plan for accepting Assurances without medical examination, but in the majority of cases there is a limit to the amount that can be assured under this arrangement.

Abstainers and General—General section

African Life—These rates are for the first 20 years and are then reduced and carry a guaranteed Bonus.

General Life—Rates reduced by 1/6 per cent. for sums assured of £1,000 to £2,499 or by 2/ per cent. for £2,500 and over.

London Life—Allowance is made for quarter-years in ages at entry.

Manufacturers—Rates are for age nearest birthday.

Natl. Mut of Aust—Rates are for age nearest birthday

Prudential—A reduction in the rate is made for Assurances of £1,000 or over, up to £5,000, and a further reduction for over £5,000. Royal—Rates reduced by 2/- per cent. for Assurances of £1,000 and over. Scottish Life—Rates reduced by 2/- per cent. for Assurances of £1,000 and over on medically examined lives. Scottish Temperance—Rates for abstainers are 20 per cent. less, limited to 9/- per £100. Sun Life—Reductions granted to total abstainers.

University Life—Total Bonuses guaranteed to amount to at least 30/- per cent. per annum for first 20 years and 35/- per cent. per annum thereafter.

Endowment Assurances.

Endowment Assurances are very popular, and are extremely attractive to persons who desire to combine a provision for their dependants, in event of premature death, with the investment of savings for the realisation of a fund for their own personal enjoyment in later life. For the investment of small annual sums there is no medium promising more satisfactory results than an Endowment assurance participating in profits in a good bonus-paying life office. The selection of such an office is all-important, as so much depends upon profit-earning capacity—see first page of Life Assurance section.

ANNUAL PREMIUMS FOR ENDOWMENT ASSURANCE OF £100. WITH PROFITS.

Under endowment assurances the sum assured is paid after a given number of years, or on the attainment of a fixed age. Should the life assured, however, die during the endowment period, the sum assured is paid at death together with any Bonuses attaching under a "with profit" Policy.

The following table shows the annual premiums, for various ages at entry, charged by the offices named, to secure £100 with profits at the end of 15, 20 and 25 years, or at death, if previous.

Notes for page 535—
* Australian Mutual Co-operative London Life and Mutual and Citizens' Rates are for quarterly payments
* Equitable—In actual quotations either Annuity or Consideration is taken to the nearest £ † London Life Rates are for exact age stated but are apportioned for actual age at time of purchase.
* London Scottish—These rates are under revision
* Sun Life of Canada—Rates for exact ages

THIS Table shows amount of Annuity granted for every £100 paid. The age is calculated from the last birthday, but many offices quote intermediate rates for every half or quarter year. By some a proportionate amount is payable to day of death. Some Companies pay whole or part of stamp duty. [For Notes see page 534.]

The Annuity is calculated as payable half-yearly. In some cases the quarterly rate is the same; in others it is a little less. Some offices grant special terms in case of impaired lives.

Endowment Assurances

Endowment Assurances are very popular, and are extremely attractive to persons who desire to combine a provision for their dependants, in event of premature death, with the investment of savings for the realisation of a fund for their own personal enjoyment in later life For the investment of small annual sums there is no medium promising more satisfactory results than an Endowment assurance participating in profits in a good bonus paying life office The selection of such an office is all important, as so much depends upon profit earning capacity—see first page of Life Assurance section.

ANNUAL PREMIUMS FOR ENDOWMENT ASSURANCE OF £100. WITH PROFITS.

Under endowment assurances the sum assured is paid after a given number of years, or on the attainment of a fixed age. Should the life assured, however, die during the endowment period, the sum assured is paid at death together with any Bonuses attaching under a "with profit" Policy

The following table shows the annual premiums, for various ages at entry, charged by the offices named, to secure £100 with profits at the end of 15, 20 and 25 years, or at death, if previous.

Notes for page 535—
* Australian Mutual Co-operative London Life and Mutual and Citizens' Rates are for quarterly payments.
* Equitable—In actual quotations either Annuity or Consideration is taken to the nearest £ † London Life Rates are for exact age stated, but are apportioned for actual age at time of purchase.
* London Scottish—These rates are under revision
* Sun Life of Canada—Rates for exact ages

THIS Table shows amount of Annuity granted for every £100 paid. The age is calculated from the last birthday, but many offices quote intermediate rates for every half or quarter year. By some a proportionate amount is payable to day of death. Some Companies pay whole or part of stamp duty. [For Notes see page 534.]

The Annuity is calculated as payable half-yearly. In some cases the quarterly rate is the same; in others it is a little less. Some offices grant special terms in case of impaired lives.

ADVICE REGARDING LIFE ASSURANCE

Apart from the immediate protection thereby given, a life or endowment assurance policy, if effected in a first class bonus paying company, provides exceptional opportunity for the remunerative investment of savings. Policyholders can claim relief from Income Tax in respect of life assurance premiums not exceeding in amount one sixth of their income, where the death risk is involved.

The selection of the office best suited to requirements and likely to produce the best results should be carefully made, but the study of any tables or suggestions is not sufficient to enable persons without technical knowledge to gauge the respective merits of the various companies. There are many good offices and in the most select class some are better adapted than others for particular purposes, and large sums may be saved or earned by intending proposers through obtaining reliable advice before a proposal is made.

Medical examinations are sometimes dispensed with in the case of new proposals but policies in these instances are sometimes subject to certain restrictive conditions.

In view of the fact that life assurance premiums are governed by age, it is advisable to produce a birth certificate or other satisfactory evidence of this when effecting a Policy. It is not always asked for then but is required by the offices before the policy monies are paid.

INQUIRIES.—On receipt of an inquiry containing particulars of requirements (accompanied by 5*s*.) addressed to "The Insurance Editor, 12, Warwick lane, E.C. 4 advice will be given as to the system and policies best adapted to the special requirements. Inquiries should state the date of birth of the person who requires the Insurance. The following are suggested as the policies most likely to be required:—

(a) Whole Life—With and without profits.
(b) „ „ —With limited number of payments.
(c) „ „ —Reduced premium for first 5 years.
(d) Endowment—With and without profits.
(e) „ —Reduced premium for first 5 years.
(f) Family Income Policies.
(g) Children's Insurances—Educational &c.

Building Societies are for the most part associations incorporated with limited liability under the Building Societies Acts The exceptions are a few societies established prior to 1857, which have chosen to remain unincorporated The object of building societies is to assist their members in acquiring dwelling houses, business premises or other freehold or leasehold property, for occupation or investment Members subscriptions are accumulated in a fund which may be augmented by deposits and loans, and advances are made from the fund to assist members in the purchase of properties Security for advances is given by a mortgage upon the property purchased Many, if not most, of the earlier societies were terminating In these societies the share subscriptions were accumulated until there was sufficient capital to make an advance to a member upon mortgage and the right to an advance or as it was called an "appropriation,' was conferred upon the fortunate member as a result of a ballot among the members who had not already received advances, or by sale to the member bidding the highest premium for the privilege of the appropriation By later legislation, however, balloting for advances was prohibited for new societies The Acts define a terminating society as one in which the rules provide for the termination of the society at a fixed date or when a result specified in its rules is attained Usually the rules provide that a society shall terminate when all the members have received advances Terminating societies are rapidly being replaced by the permanent societies, some of which have become very wealthy and important financial institutions

All building societies are required to register their rules and file their accounts with the Registrar of Friendly Societies, who is also Registrar of Building Societies

Following the announcement of the War Loan Conversion Scheme in 1932, there was a move on the part of some of the large building societies towards restriction of new share investment accounts and reduction of the rate of interest payable to new depositors and in some instances new share investors The possibility that this move would be followed by a reduction in mortgage interest rates was suggested in the press, but there is as yet no indication that any action in this direction is contemplated by societies generally The interest rate charged to borrowers is said to average 5 6 per cent per annum, and the rate allowed to investors and depositors 4 36 per cent per annum

The following is a summary of particulars extracted from the Registrar's Report —

The 'Remedy' is the amount of variation from standard permitted in fineness and in weight of coins when first issued from the Mint

Standard Gold contains twenty-two twenty fourths (carats) of fine gold and two twenty fourths of alloy, fineness 916 66 or 22 carats 240 troy ounces of standard gold are coined into 934 sovereigns and one half sovereign one troy ounce is therefore worth £3 17s 10½d, and one ounce of pure gold, on the same basis £4 4s 11½d During 1932 the average market price of gold fluctuated in accordance with the $ sterling exchange, being 119/10 on October 15 Bar Gold —The "bar as purchased in the bullion market, is 400 oz troy (except for the Far East which requires 10 oz bars).

Standard Silver formerly consisted of thirty seven fortieths of fine silver and three fortieths of alloy fineness 925 Silver for coinage by an Amending Act (10 Geo V ch 3) consists of one half silver, one half alloy, or in millesimal fineness, 500, 12 troy ounces of 500 fineness are coined into 66 shillings † [Another Standard called the "New Sterling or Britannia of the fineness 11 oz 10 dwt. (958 33) is practically obsolete It is occasionally used however for high class plate]

The Average Yearly Price of Silver per standard Troy Ounce in the London Market during the last twelve years was as follows —1919 57 7/16d, 1920, 61 5/16d, 1921 36 7/8d, 1922 34 7/16d 1923 32 11/16d, 1924, 34d, 1925 32 1/8d, 1926 28 1/16d, 1927 26 3/16d., 1928, 26 1/4d, 1929, 24 7/16d 1930 17 1/4d, 1931, 14 11/16d On Oct 15 1932, the price of silver was 17 1/16d per oz

In the United States the price of silver is quoted in cents per troy ounce fine In order to convert an English quotation into cents per ounce fine, first express the pence as a whole number and decimal fraction and then multiply by 2 10s, to express a United States price on the English system multiply the cents by 0 456

‡Bronze is an alloy of copper 95 parts tin 4 parts, and zinc 1 part, or of copper 95½ parts, tin 3 parts and zinc 1½ parts

* Issued on special occasions

† By law a shilling weighs one sixty sixth of 12 oz Troy, 12 oz. of pure silver would be used in coining 792 shillings of 925 fineness and 132 of 500 fineness.

The legal weight of a penny is one third, of the fpenny one fifth, and of the farthing one-tenth of ounce avoirdupois, the halfpenny is one tenth in

The Collector will find but little difficulty in distinguishing a letter of one cycle from that of another, presuming his knowledge to be insufficient to judge by the style and period of the article itself, e.g.:

An article marked with the letter F 1721-2 can be distinguished from letter F 1801-2 by the difference in the shape of the respective shields; as also those containing the crowned leopard's head and the lion passant; the absence of the sovereign's head in the former as against its presence in the latter case; the different form of the leopard's head (which was "crowned" until 1823); and lastly, the irregularity of the stamp in the first case as compared with the uniformity of the latter stamp. These again can be distinguished from F 1881-2 as before, by the different shield of the date letter only (the shields of the remaining marks being the same as those of 1801-2); the absence of crown on leopard's head, and the presence of the Queen's vice the King's head.

Imported Plate.

Any gold or silver plate or article manufactured out of the United Kingdom and brought to be assayed, stamped or marked at a British or an Irish Assay Office must be marked in the manner prescribed by the Order in Council of May 11, 1906, under which the mark for each Assay Office is ordained to be:—London, the sign of the Constellation Leo; Birmingham, Equilateral Triangle; Chester, Acorn and two leaves; Sheffield, the sign of the Constellation Libra; Edinburgh, St. Andrew's Cross; Glasgow, double block letter F inverted; Dublin, Boujet. The annual date letter is to be added by the Assay Office, as for plate, etc., of home manufacture.

The Periods of English Architecture.

	Date.	Style.
I.	Before B.C. 55	Ancient British.
II.	B.C. 55 to A.D. 420	Roman Period.
III.	A.D. 449 to Norman Conquest (1066)	Anglo-Saxon.
IV.	1066–1189 (i.e. to end 12th cent.)	Norman.
V.	1189–1307 (i.e. 13th cent.)	Early English (Lancet, or Geometrical).
VI.	1307–1377 (i.e. 14th cent.)	Decorated (or Curvilinear).
VII.	1377–1485 (i.e. 15th cent.)	Perpendicular (or Rectilinear).
VIII	1485–1558 (i.e. first half 16th cent.)	Tudor.
IX.	A.D. 1558–1625 Early Renaissance	Elizabethan (A.D. 1558–1603). Jacobean (A.D. 1603–1625).
X.	A.D. 1625–1830. Late Renaissance	Stuart (A.D. 1625–1702). Queen Anne and Georgian (A.D. 1702–1830).
Modern Architecture (The Age of Revivals)	19th cent. to present time	William IV. (A.D. 1830–1837). Victoria (A.D. 1837–1901). Edward VII. (A.D. 1901–1910). George V. (A.D. 1910–).

This Comparative Table shows the approximate period of each style. It must, however, be remembered that the transition from one style to the next was slow and gradual, and can often hardly be traced, so minute are the differences. It is only for convenience in alluding to the different stages of evolution that the division is made, for it must not be forgotten that the Architecture of England is one continuous development.

Note.—The first portion (I–VIII) of this table is based upon that given on p. 347, Parts IX and X on p. 777, and "Modern" on p. 852, of "A History of Architecture on the Comparative Method" (4th ed.), by Sir Banister Fletcher, P.R.I.B.A., F.S.A. (Batsford.)

MARKS ON PORCELAIN

POTTERY or porcelain usually bear distinctive marks either painted on or stamped into the bottom of the article These marks may indicate the factory the potter or the decorator and in the case of Chinese or Japanese ware the dynasty at the date of manufacture In the factory at Sevres the practice of marking the date by letters was also followed and this has led to the forging of many bogus pieces The factories in Europe generally indicate the place of origin only Special knowledge is therefore required of the collector and the learned amateur notes not only the mark but the material the colouring, and the decoration of the article and frequently has to compare it with one that is unquestionably genuine The following hints will in the absence of the more learned dissertation of Mr Chaffers, serve as a guide to the ordinary possessor or purchaser

In the manufacture of porcelain, two main varieties of paste are used termed respectively hard and soft or as the French have it pate dure et pâte tendre The hard paste contains more alumina and less silica than the soft When baked it is translucent hard and sonorous on being struck it has a white milky colour and can sustain without injury sudden alternations of high and low temperature Its essential constituent is pure white kaolin a variety of clay which is exceedingly scarce in England and other parts of Europe but of comparatively common occurrence in many districts of China and Japan The soft variety has an unctuous cream like enamel and is soapy to the touch it is lighter than the other kind, and less hard (a knife will scratch it) and does not require so great a heat for solidification

The manufacture of hard and what is often considered the only true porcelain was invented by the Chinese about 180 B C and attained its greatest perfection at the beginning of the 11th century The secrets of the art were in 1221 carried over to Japan whose inhabitants soon became formidable rivals to the older makers Specimens of this eastern ware had, from a very early date occasionally found their way into Europe but no regular importation took place until the middle of the 16th century when a small settlement was formed on the Japanese coast by some enterprising traders from Portugal It was from them that the ware first received the name it now bears its translucence probably reminding them of the cowrie shell which from a supposed resemblance to the shape of a young pig, had been termed, in their language, porcellana

In 1641 the Japanese authorities, having viewed with strong disapproval the many conversions to Christianity effected by the Portuguese missionaries expelled the settlers from the island, and gave to the Dutch who could always be trusted to refrain from proselytizing, the exclusive privilege of trading with them Although the commercial industry of the Hollanders supplied England and the Continent with comparatively large quantities of the Oriental porcelain ware, the finer specimens were eagerly sought after, and, by Queen Anne's time, all classes seem to have become infected by a collecting mania The high prices they fetched naturally led to many attempts at imitation which owing to the difficulty in finding a suitable clay all resulted in more or less marked failure nothing but the inferior pate tendre being produced

The first successful experiment was made, with the kaolin from Aue in the Erzgebirge, by J F Bottcher who had accidentally gained a knowledge of its valuable properties In consequence of the discovery Augustus Elector of Saxony was induced to set up a porcelain factory near Dresden with Bottcher as director and in 1715 the latter succeeded in producing an almost perfect imitation of the hard, white porcelain of the East The most elaborate precautions were taken to prevent the secret of its manufacture getting abroad but a very few years later a heavy bribe extracted it from one of the workmen and a rival factory was established at Vienna The works at Berlin Baden, and other towns in Germany all owed their origin in the same way to the dishonesty of different employés The decorations of the earlier German productions were merely imitations in blue and white of the Chinese and Japanese but towards the middle of the 18th century elaborate miniature paintings of flowers insects and copies of well known pictures became fashionable The best statuettes and groups were made between 1731 and 1756 the finest of these are in plain glazed white though many are gaily decorated and the dress richly ornamented with fine lace

Of the factories in England it is doubtful which has best claim to be termed the oldest both the Chelsea and the Bow works were established before 1750 and those of Derby and Worcester very shortly after that date Though at first confining themselves to imitations of the simple Oriental models the English makers soon attained great perfection in the German and French styles and, after the discovery of the Cornwall kaolin in 1755 their best productions ranked in every respect very little lower than the masterpieces of Dresden and Sèvres

In France a factory for the soft variety had been set up at St Cloud as early as 1695, and some excellent work was produced there In 1753 works under royal patronage were set up at Vincennes and three years later removed to Sèvres The best productions were sent out during the nine years which followed the purchase of the manufactory by Louis XV in 1760 At the end of this period the discovery of kaolin near Limoges led to a discontinuance of the manufacture of pâte tendre in favour of the more highly valued pâte dure Sevres porcelain made for use is usually painted with flowers or figure subjects on a plain white ground The purely decorative pieces have panels with pictures on a white ground surrounded by frames of gold scroll work, the main body of the piece is covered with one deep or brilliant colour

The following are the chief marks used in the more important European manufactories The description of the appearance of the various porcelains may be found useful in the detection of forgeries, spurious pieces being unfortunately almost as abundant as genuine specimens —

GERMANY—(Hard Paste).

DRESDEN —The porcelain has a cold white almost bluish, tint. The marks are always in blue

1709–1712 —The initials of Augustus Rex

1712–1720 —The wand of Æscu lapius.

1721, with intervals to present time —The crossed swords

1731–1733 —The same, with a dot between the handles

1796 1814 (Marcolini period) The same, with a star between the handles

Scratches across the mark show there is some defect in the piece

Sometimes the handles meet, and cause a slight variation in the appearance of the mark

K P M was painted in italics on pieces intended for royal use

VIENNA —The porcelain has generally, a greyish tint The usual mark is a shield, in blue

BERLIN —The porcelain closely resembles that of Dresden In 1761 the manufactory was made a royal establishment The marks are generally in blue, though a brown sceptre is occasionally found.

1751 1761 —A capital W, with two of the strokes crossing

1761 onwards —A sceptre Occasionally there are two sceptres, crossed to imitate the Dresden mark At the present day the porcelain is stamped with the Prussian eagle, encircled by the words KOENIGL PORZELLAN MANUFACTUR

ENGLAND—(Soft Paste till 1755).

CHELSEA —The porcelain is of a pure white colour, with a tint almost equal to that of the hard kind The mark is an anchor, in gold for the best in red for the second quality

BOW —The porcelain is of a fine milky white In 1750 the works received the name of New Canton and in 1775 were transferred to Derby The marks are very various, and often not distinguishable from those of Chelsea We give two varieties which generally occur in blue

DERBY —The porcelain is very transparent and of a good white colour In 1769 the proprietor of the factory W Duesbury purchased the kilns and moulds of the Chelsea works The marks are in pink violet or gold The earliest mark was an italic D

After 1769, the same crossed with an anchor (DERBY CHELSEA)

After 1775 the date of the first royal order, a crown with crossed daggers or a D, or an anchor (CROWN DERBY)

WORCESTER —The porcelain is not of a very good colour, but is tolerably transparent

The earliest mark was a W or a crescent in blue Crossed arrows and imitations of Chinese and Dresden marks are also found

FRANCE—(Soft Paste till 1770)

VINCENNES and SEVRES —The porcelain is remarkable for its creamy softness of colour The Sevres period dates from 1756 when the factory was removed thither from Vincennes

1745 1753 —Two italic L s crossed
1753 1756 —The same, with a letter in the centre The letters A Z denote the years 1753–77 The Sèvres period begins with D

1778–1795 —The period of double letters A A R R
1795–1800 —R F the initials of République Française

From 1800 to the present time, the mark has varied with each change of sovereign or government and is, generally, self explaining.

The Weights and Measures Act of 1878 superseding all previous laws, enacts the legal measures for Great Britain, basing them upon the Standard Yard and the Standard Pound in the custody of the Standards Department of the Board of Trade

The YARD and the POUND are the only two independent standards for weights and measures The GALLON, the capacity standard wet or dry is based upon the Pound The Act of 1878 defines the Gallon as the volume of ten standard pounds of distilled water weighed in air against brass weights both water and air at the temperature of 62° Fahrenheit with the barometer at 30 inches

Apothecaries' Weight

Measures of Weight

20 grains = 1 scruple (℈) (= 1 296 Grammes)
3 scruples = 1 drachm (ʒi) (= 3 888 Grammes)
8 drachms = 1 ounce (= ℥i 1035 Grammes)

Measures of Capacity

60 minims (min) = 1 fluid drachm (= 3 552 Millilitres)
8 fluid drachms = 1 fluid ounce (= 2 84123 Centilitres)
20 fluid ounces = 1 pint (= 0 568 Litre)
8 pints = 1 GALLON (= 4 5459631 Litres)

The Apothecaries grain is the Avoirdupois grain and the Apothecaries ounce is the Troy ounce, of 480 grains The Apothecaries drachm is not the same as the Avoirdupois dram and is spelt differently A fluid ounce of distilled water at a temperature of 62° Fahrenheit is equal in weight to the Avoirdupois ounce (437 5 grains) A fluid drachm (54 6875 grains) is equal in weight to TWO Avoirdupois drams

Approximate Equivalents —
1 table spoon = ½ fluid oz 1 dessert spoon = ¼ fluid oz., 1 tea spoon = ⅛ fluid oz

Avoirdupois Weight.

7000 grains (gr) = 1 pound (lb)
16 drams (dr) = 1 ounce (oz) (= 28 350 Grammes)
16 ounces = 1 POUND (= 0 45359243 Kilogram)
14 pounds = 1 stone* (= 6 350 Kilograms)
28 pounds = 1 quarter (of a cwt) (= 12 70 Kilograms)
100 pounds = 1 cental (= 45 359243 Kilograms)
4 quarters (112 lb) = 1 hundredweight (cwt) (= 50 8023 Kilograms)
20 hundredweight (2 240 lb) = 1 ton (= 1 0160 Tonnes or 1016 0 Kilograms)

Troy Weight

24 grains = 1 pennyweight (dwt) (= 1 5552 Grammes)
20 dwt = 1 ounce (= ℥i 1035 Grammes)

For gold and silver the ounce, divided decimally, and not into grains is the sole unit of weight The Troy ounce is the same as the Apothecaries ounce, = 480 Avoirdupois grains (℥i 1035 Grammes) in weight There is no Troy POUND

Jewellers' Weight

The metric carat of 200 milligrammes is the legal standard of weight for precious stones and pearls

* The Smithfield stone (for dead meat) is 8 lb only

Measures of Capacity.

4 gills = 1 pint (= 0 568 Litre)
2 pints = 1 quart (= 1 136 Litres)
4 quarts = 1 GALLON (= 4 5459631 Litres).
1 gallon = 277 274 cubic inches
2 gallons = 1 peck (= 9 0919 Litres)
8 gallons = 1 bushel (= 3 637 Dekalitres)
8 bushels = 1 quarter (= 2 909 Hectolitres).
A chaldron is 36 bushels = 4½ quarters

Measures of Length

12 inches (in) = 1 foot (ft) (= 0 30480 Metre)
3 feet = 1 yard (yd) (= 0 914399 Metre)
6 feet = 1 fathom (= 1 8288 Metres)
5½ yards = 1 pole (= 5 0292 Metres)
22 yards = 1 chain = 100 links (= 20 1168 Metres)
10 chains = 1 furlong (= 201 168 Metres).
8 furlongs = 1 mile = 1 760 yards (= 1 6093 3 miles = 1 league (obsolete) [Kilometres)

A Cricket Pitch is 22 yards (one chain) between the stumps

A Lawn Tennis Court is 78 × 36 feet (double) and 78 × 27 feet (single)

A Croquet Lawn is 105 × 84 feet (full size) or a smaller multiple of 5 × 4 feet

A Badminton Court is 44 × 20 ft., with net 30 ins deep and 5 ft high at centre

A Polo Ground is 300 × 160 yds

A Football Ground (Association) is 120 × 80 yds (full size) (Rugby) 110 × 75 yds (full size)

Birmingham Gauge

The equivalent of an inch is 15/0 B G The numbers proceed by units down to 1/0 B G, which = 0 3964 inch and from 1 B G (35 2 inch) by units to 52 B G (0 0095 inch)

Square or Surface Measure

144 sq inches = 1 sq foot (= 9 2903 Sq Decimetres)
9 sq feet = 1 sq yard (= 0 836126 Sq Metre)
30¼ sq yards = 1 perch, or rod, or pole (= 25 293 Sq Metres)
40 perches = 1 rood (= 0 10117 Hectare)
4 roods = 1 acre (= 0 40468 Hectare)
10 square chains = 1 acre [metres)
640 acres = 1 square mile (= 2 5895 Sq Kilometres)

Dimensions of an Acre —The acre 4,840 sq yards or 220 × 22 yards The length of a side of a square acre is 69 57 yards an area 110 × 22 yards (or 220 × 11 yards) would be half an acre an area 55 × 22 yards (or 110 × 11 yards) would be one quarter of an acre and so on

Cubic Measure

1 728 cubic inches = 1 cubic foot (= 0 028317 Cubic metre)
27 cubic feet = 1 cubic yard (= 0 764553 Cubic metre)

Angular or Circular Measure.

60 seconds (″) = 1 minute (′)
60 minutes = 1 degree (°)
30 degrees = 1 sign
90 degrees = 1 right angle or quadrant
12 signs (4 quadrants) = 1 circumference
Diameter of circle × 3 1416 = circumference.
Diameter squared × 7854 = area of circle.
Diameter squared × 3 1416 = surface of sphere.
Diameter cubed × 5236 = solidity of sphere
One degree of circumference × 57 3 = radius
Diameter of cylinder × 3 1416, product by length or height gives the surface
Diameter squared × 7854 product by length or height, gives solid content

Note —A circle of 7 yards diameter has, in practice, a circumference of 22 yards = 1 chain.

Miscellaneous Weights and Measures

Apples (Bushel) = 37 to 43 lb (average 40 lb).
Ballast (Pig) = 56 lb
Beef (Barrel) = 200 lb
Biscuits (Bag) = 112 lb
Blacklead (Cask) = 11½ cwt.
Butter (Barrel) = 4 firkins = 224 lb
Camphor (Box) = 1 cwt
Cloves (Matt) = 80 lb
" (Chest) = 200 lb
Coal (Sack) = 224 lb
(Bushel) = 80 lb
" (Chaldron) = 85 bushels

Glass (Seam) = 24 stone of 5 lb = 120 lb
Gunpowder (Barrel) = 100 lb
Hides (Last) = 12 dozen
Honey (Gallon) = 12 lb
Hops (Bag) = 280 lb
" (Pocket) = 1½ to 2 cwt
Lead (Fodder) —
London and Hull = 19½ cwt
Derby and Newcastle = 22½ cwt
Meat (Stone) = 8 lb
Nuts (Barcelona Bag) = 126 lb
Oats (Barrel) = 14 stone
Pepper (Bag of black) = 316 lb
(Lag of white) = 168 lb
Pork (Barrel) = 224 lb
Potatoes (Sack) = 112 lb (since 1923)
Raisins (Barrel) = 112 lb
Rice (Bag) = 168 lb
Sago (Bag) = 112 lb
Saltpetre (Bag) = 168 lb
Soft Soap (Barrel or Pack) = 256 lb
(Firkin) = 64 lb
Steel (Faggot) = 120 lb
Sugar (Bag) = 112–196 lb
(Hogshead) = 13 to 16 cwt
(Pierce) = 7 to 9 cwt
Tar (Barrel) = 26¼ gallons
Tea (Chest) = 84 lb
Tobacco (Hogshead) = 12 to 18 cwt
Turpentine (Barrel) = 224 to 280 lb
Wood (Cord) = 128 cubic feet
Wool (Sack) = 364 lb

Wheat Corn and Flour

Under the Corn Sales Act of 1921 the Corn Returns Act of 1882 is amended and provision is made for the sale of cereals by weight in terms of the hundredweight of 112 imperial standard pounds

100 lb wheat produces 70 lb flour
100 lb flour produces 130 lb bread
A quartern loaf = 4 lb
A last of grain = 80 bushels

NOTE—A Quarter is a heaped measure of 8 bushels A quarter of English wheat is reckoned as 504 lb. weight On the Winnipeg Grain Market the standard bushel of oats is reckoned at 34 lb., in U S A at 32 lb

Hay and Straw

Truss of Straw 36 lb Truss of Old Hay, 56 lb
Truss of New Hay (to September 1st), 60 lb
Load of hay or straw = 36 trusses
Ton of hay = 36 trusses
An acre of grass should yield 1 to 2 tons of hay

Sizes of Barrels and Bottles	Gals
Firkin or Quarter Barrel	9 = 9 × 1
Kilderkin, Rundlet, or Barrel	18 = 9 × 2
Barrel	36 = 9 × 4
Hogshead (1½ barrels)	54 = 9 × 6
Puncheon (2 barrels)	72 = 9 × 8
Butt of Ale (3 barrels)	108 = 9 × 12

An Anker = 10 gallons a Tierce = 42 gallons, a Pipe of Port or Masdew = 115 gals Teneriffe = 100 gals Marsala = 93 gals Madeira and Cape = 92 gals Sherry and Lent = 108 gals Butt of Lisbon and Bucellas = 117 gals Aum of Hock and Rhenish = 30 gals Hogshead of Brandy, 60 gals Claret, 46 Port 57 Sherry, 54 Madeira, 46 gallons, Puncheon of Brandy or Rum = 120 gals

Bottles—The customary glass bottle of wine or spirits should contain one sixth of a gallon = 26⅔ fluid ounces

In the drug trade two large bottles are used —

Corbyn	=40 fluid oz	(quart)
Winchester quart	=80 "	(½ gallon)

Water

Cubic inch	=	252 458 grains
Gallon (277 274 cub in)	=	10 lb (distilled)
Cubic foot	=	62 321 lb
35 943 cubic ft (224 gals)	=	1 ton

Water for Ships Tun 210 gals, Butt 110 Puncheon 72 Barrel 36 Kilderkin 18 gals

An Inch of Rain on the surface of an acre (43 560 sq feet) = 3 630 cubic feet = 100 993 tons

Cisterns A cistern 4 feet by 2½ and 3 deep will hold brimful 186 963 gallons, weighing 16 cwt 2 qrs 21 6 lb in addition to its own weight

Railway Gauges

In Great Britain = 4 ft 8½ in
" Ireland = 5 ft 3 in
" U S A = 4 ft 8½ in
The 4 ft 8½ in gauge is also used in Canada France Germany Netherlands Belgium Denmark Austria Hungary, Italy Switzerland Sweden and Europe in Turkey
" Australia —
N S W = 3 ft 6 in and 4 ft 8½ in Victoria and South Australia = 5 ft 3 in Queensland and Western Australia = 3 ft 6 in New Zealand = 3 ft 6 in India = 2 ft 6 in 3 ft 3⅜ in and 5 ft 6 in South Africa = 3 ft 6 in Egypt = 4 ft 8½, and 3 ft 6 in Ceylon = 5 ft 6 in Japan = 3 ft 6 in Spain and Portugal = 5 ft 6 in U S S R = 5 ft 0 in Asia Minor = 4 ft 8½ in and 3 ft 5½ in single track of 4 ft 8½ in gauge requires 12 ft of roadway, a double track requires 23 ft of roadway

Electrical Measures

It is customary to express electrical measurements in terms of the centimetre the gramme, and the second (C G S units), and the value of the units has been fixed by international agreement. The principal units are as follow :—

As a unit of resistance, the international Ohm, which is based upon the ohm equal to 10^9 units of resistance of the C.G.S. system of electromagnetic units, and is represented by the resistance offered to an unvarying electric current by a column of mercury at the temperature of melting ice, 14·4521 grammes in mass, of a constant cross-sectional area, and of a length of 106·3 centimetres.

As a unit of current, the international Ampère, which is one-tenth of the unit of current of the C.G.S. system of electro-magnetic units and which is represented sufficiently well for practical use by the unvarying current which, when passed through a solution of nitrate of silver in water, in accordance with a certain specification, deposits silver at the rate of 0·001118 of a gramme per second.

As a unit of electro-motive force, the international Volt, which is the E.M.F. that, steadily applied to a conductor whose resistance is one international ohm, will produce a current of one international ampère, and which is represented sufficiently well for practical use by $\frac{1000}{1434}$ of the E.M.F. between the poles or electrodes of the voltaic cell known as Clark's cell at a temperature of 15° C., and prepared in the manner described in a certain specification.

As a unit of quantity, the international Coulomb, which is the quantity of electricity transferred by a current of one international ampere in one second.

As a unit of capacity, the international Farad, which is the capacity of a conductor charged to a potential of one international volt by one international coulomb of electricity. The unit generally used in practice is one-millionth part of this, or the microfarad.

As the unit of work, the Joule, which is 10^7 units of work in the C.G.S. system, and which is represented sufficiently well for practical use by the energy expended in one second by an international ampère in an international ohm. In practice the watt-hour is usually employed. It represents the work done by such a current in an hour, and equals 3,600 joules.

As the unit of power, the Watt, which is 10^7 units of power in the C.G.S. system, and which is represented sufficiently well for practical use by the work done at the rate of one joule per second. 746 watts = 1 horse-power, and the value of a Board of Trade unit (B.O.T.U.) is 1,000 watt-hours, or 3,600,000 joules, or 1⅓ horse-power hours.

As the unit of induction, the Henry, which is the induction in the circuit when the E.M.F. induced in this circuit is one international volt, while the inducing current varies at the rate of one international ampère per second.

A Rod of Brickwork 16½ feet × 16½ feet × 1½ brick thick = 306 cubic feet, or 11⅓ cubic yards, and contains about 4,500 bricks with about 75 cubic feet of mortar. The rod being 5 British metres, a rod of brickwork is 25 square metres 1½ bricks thick = very nearly 10 cubic metres.

Ordinary bricks weigh about 7 lb. each ; a load of 500 weighs about 1 ton 11 cwt. 1 qr.

A Piece of machine printed Wall Paper is 11½ yd. long and 21 in. wide ; of hand printed 12 yd. long × 21 in. wide. French wall papers are usually 9 yd. × 18 in.

Timber and Wood.

100 superficial feet = 1 square of flooring.
50 cubic feet of planks = 1 load.
42 do. timber = 1 shipping ton.
108 do. do. = 1 stack.
128 do. do. = 1 cord.

A standard hundred of deals contains 120 pieces. The Petrograd standard consists of 165 cubic feet, or 120 pieces 1½ in. × 11 in. × 12 ft., or 120 pieces 3 in. × 11 in. × 6 ft.

A Batten is not more than 7 inches wide ; a Deal not more than 9 inches ; Planks are 2 to 4 inches thick, and 10 inches and up in width.

Fish.

In Scotland, and at certain places in England and Wales at which the Cran Measures Act, 1908, has been put into operation, fresh herrings must be sold by the Cran, containing 37½

imperial gallons, or Quarter Cran of 9⅜ imperial gallons In the Isle of Man and in Ireland herrings are sold by the Maze, which contains 5 long hundreds of 126 each On the East Coast of England, at places where the above mentioned Act is not in force, they are sold by the Last, which contains 13 200 fish They are counted by the Warp, which is 4 fish 33 Warps = 1 Long Hundred, 132, 10 Hundred = 1 Thousand, 1,320, 10 Thousand = 1 Last 13,200 Cured herrings are sold in barrels, the capacity of which, in Scotland, must always be 26⅔ imperial gallons, or in half barrels of 13⅓ gallons Herring barrels or half barrels must be of corresponding capacity in England and Wales if they are presented for the Government Brand at any place at which the Herring Fishery (Branding) Act, 1913, is in force

A Quintal of fish (Newfoundland &c) is 112 lb, a barrel of anchovies = 30 lb a "box of fish" is about 90 lb a Newfoundland "box of fish" contains 100 lb, 112 lb or 128 lb, to suit the requirements of the different markets

Geographical Measures.

The North and South Poles are two points at the opposite extremities of that diameter of the earth round which it revolves The Equator is a great circle equally distant from the North and South Poles For geographical purposes, the surface of the earth is divided by circles, called the circles of Latitude and Longitude The circles of Latitude are small circles parallel to the Equator The circles of Longitude are great circles perpendicular to the Equator, and passing through the North and South Poles These circles are divided into Degrees Minutes and Seconds Degrees of Latitude are numbered from the Equator to the North and South Poles Degrees of Longitude are numbered from the primary circle of Longitude or Meridian, which passes through the astronomical observatory of Greenwich (England) The Date or Calendar Line is shown on p 158

A Geographical Mile is the length of one minute of Latitude If the earth was a sphere, every minute of Latitude would be of the same length, but, as it is a spheroid the length of a minute increases from 6 046 feet at the Equator to 6 108 feet at the Poles The mean length of the geographical mile is 6,076 8 feet The Nautical Mile is (strictly speaking) the length of a minute of the meridian and is thus identical with the geographical mile In practice, however, it is taken as the Admiralty Knot of 6,080 feet divided into 10 cables, which are assumed to be 100 fathoms, or 600 feet

The Polar diameter of the Earth is 7 899 English miles The mean equatorial diameter is 7,926 miles The circumference at the Equator is 24,902 miles

Measures of Heat.

The comparisons in col 2 are of Thermometers constructed by Fahrenheit, Celsius and Reaumur Gabriel Daniel Fahrenheit F R S (1686–1736), was born at Danzig, and lived a great part of his life in England and the Netherlands He was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1724 Anders Celsius (1710 1744), inventor of the Centigrade thermometer, was born at Upsala, Sweden, and was for many years Professor of Astronomy at the University of Upsala Rene Antoine Ferchault de Reaumur (1683–1757), was born at La Rochelle, France, and became known as "The Pliny of the XVIIIth Century" on account of his work as a Natural Historian

Nautical Measures.

6 feet = 1 fathom.
100 fathoms = 1 cable length.
10 cables = 1 nautical mile.
60 nautical miles = 1 degree.

The assumed length of the cable is 600 feet (=182·87 metres), but it is strictly 606·97 feet (= 185 metres). The conventional Nautical Mile (the Knot in speed measurements) is 10 cables, assumed at 6,080 feet (strictly 6,069·7 feet), but the Nautical Mile is strictly the length of a minute of the meridian and differs according to latitude.

Ship Measurement.

The Ton-measurement of cargo was originally the space occupied by 4 hogsheads (= a Tun) of wine = 50 cubic feet. It is now 40 cubic feet, which is approximately the bulk of 4 quarters, or a short ton, of wheat.

The Ton-register, the unit of capacity of a ship, was originally the space occupied by a Last of 10 Quarters of wheat = 100 cubic feet. This cubic space is the Ton-register used by all maritime nations, 100 English cubic feet.

Gross tonnage is the sum in cubic feet of all the various enclosed spaces of a vessel, divided by 100.

Net tonnage is the gross tonnage less certain deductions on account of crew spaces, engine room, water ballast, and other spaces not used for passengers or cargo.

Dead-weight tonnage, or carrying capacity, is the number of tons (of 2,240 lb.) of cargo that a vessel is capable of carrying when charged to the load water line (q.v.).

Displacement tonnage is the number of tons of sea water displaced by a vessel when charged to the load water line (q.v.), i.e., it is the weight of vessel and contents in tons.

Load-water-line is the line that would be made round the shell of a vessel when loaded as deep as the minimum freeboard regulations permit.

Draught is the distance in feet from the lowest part of the bottom of a vessel to the actual water line at which the vessel is floating. Thus the load-water-line marks the greatest, or loaded, draught of a vessel. A vessel without any cargo in her hold or passengers or their luggage aboard is said to be "light ship," or "light," or "in ballast."

Free Board is the distance from the main or upper deck to the load-water-line of a vessel. As a general rule the minimum free board provides an amount of reserve buoyancy that will keep a vessel afloat with two compartments holed.

Bells and Watches on Board Ship.

Bells.—Time is kept by means of a bell, which is struck every half hour. Anyone who, in an effort to terminate his watch prematurely, strikes the bell early, is accused of "warming the bell," an expression which has grown to include the doing of anything before the appointed time.

Watches.—For purposes of discipline, and to divide the work fairly, the crew is mustered in two divisions: the Starboard* (right side, looking forward) and the Port* (left). The day commences at noon, and is thus divided :—

Watch.	Bells (in ½ hours).
Afternoon.....	noon to 4 p.m., 1 to 8.
First Dog.....	4 p.m. to 6 p.m., 1, 2, 3, 4.
†Last or §Second Dog	6 p.m. to 8 p.m., 1, 2, 3, 8.
First	8 p.m to midnight, 1 to 8.
Middle	midnight to 4 a.m., 1 to 8.
Morning	4 a.m. to 8 a.m., 1 to 8.
Forenoon.....	8 a.m. to noon, 1 to 8.

This makes seven Watches, enabling the crew to keep them alternately, as the Watch which is on duty in the forenoon one day has the afternoon next day, and the men who have only four hours' rest one night have eight hours the next. This is the reason for having Dog Watches, which are made by dividing the hours between 4 p.m. and 8 p.m. into two Watches.

For TIME AT SEA see p. 158.

Speed of Ships.

The Knot is a measure of speed of ships. The following table shows the equivalents of 1 to 48 knots in land (statute) miles per hour :—

Knots.	Miles.	Knots.	Miles.	Knots.	Miles.
	1·1515	15	17·2727		33·3939

Measures of Energy, &c.

In Physics the unit of force is the dyne, the amount that, acting for one second on one gramme mass, gives it a velocity of one centimetre per second. The British unit is the poundal, which in one second gives one pound a velocity of one foot per second. One poundal = 13,825·5 dynes. In Meteorology the unit of atmospheric pressure is the Bar, equal to the pressure of 1,000,000 dynes (1 megadyne) per sq. centimetre. The Meteorological Bar is thus 1,000,000 Chemical Bars.

Horse power is energy exerted at the rate of 550 foot-pounds per second; an alternative unit is the kilowatt (102 kilogram-meters per second)= 737·59 foot pounds per second.

Thermal Unit.—The British Thermal Unit (B.Th.U.) is the amount of heat required to raise one pound of water one degree Fahrenheit. The Gas Therm = 100,000 B.Th.U. If V = cu. ft. consumed, H=declared heat value of the Company's gas (in B.Th.U. per cu. ft.), P = cost of therm in pence, B=total bill in pence—then $B = V \times H \times P \div 100{,}000$, whence equivalent cost (in pence) per 1,000 cu. ft. $= B \times 1{,}000 \div V = H \times P \div 100$.

Yarn Measures.

Cotton and Spun Silk Count.—
Thread = 1½ yards.
Lea or Skein, skn. = 120 yards.
Hank, hk. = 7 Skeins, or Leas = 840 yards.
Spindle, spdl. = 18 Hanks.
Counts = the number of Hanks in 1 lb
Bundle Hanks, either of 5 lb. or 10 lb.

Reels of cotton vary from 30 to 1,760 yards; they must be marked correctly.

Bundles of Cotton are chiefly made up for export.

Worsted Count.—Wrap, 80 yards; Hank = 560 yards = 7 Wraps; Counts or Numbers are the number of hanks in a lb.

Linen Count.—The Hank or Lea is 300 yards, and the number of these in 1 lb. is the count of the yarn. A Spindle is 48 hanks; a Bundle is 200 hanks.

West of England Count.—The Hank is 320 yards, and the number of hanks in 1 lb. is the count of the yarn.

NOTE.—Books are usually bound up in sheets of 16 or 32 pages. Octavo books are generally printed 64 pages at a time (32 pages on each side of a sheet of quad); a crown octavo book of 320 pages will therefore require 5 sheets of quad crown and a ream will provide 100 books the odd 16 sheets being reckoned as waste. Newspapers (and books circulating in large numbers) are printed on rotary presses for which the paper is supplied on reels (and not in cut reams). 'Whitaker' is printed on a rotary press 192 pages at a time the paper being served to the press from a reel, and 6 sheets of 32 pages are delivered, printed and folded, at the opposite end of the press.

Sizes of Type

The type chiefly used in Whitaker is named Nonpareil (6 point). The column contains 75 lines and is 12 Pica ems wide; on an average every column contains about 3 000 letters or 600 words.

All Founders cast their type to one uniform height (type high), which is ⅑ inch. Individual letters vary in breadth but the "body" of each character is of uniform depth throughout the alphabet in each fount. The unit of breadth is the Pica M (Em) 6 of which side by side occupy one inch of space. The unit of depth is the Point (72 Points = 1 inch) so that 6 lines of 12 Point occupy 1 inch in depth. The names and sizes of the various founts are —

Brilliant (3½ point). A column the size of this in Whitaker if set in Brilliant would contain 124 lines and about 7 500 letters.

CORRECTING FOR THE PRESS.

Copyright by WILLIAM CLOWES & SONS, LTD, Printers of "WHITAKER'S ALMANACK.

The following extract is set up incorrectly in order to explain the conventional methods of correcting for the Press —

The process of printing, when compared with that of writing, is unquestionably a ~~dear~~ process, provided a sufficient number of any particular book are printed, so as to temper the proportion of the first expense upon a single copy inconsiderable If, for example, it were required, even at the present ~~moment~~ time, to print a single copy, or even three copies or four, only of any production, the cost of printing would be greater than the cost of transcribing

It is when hundreds and especially thousands, of the same work are demanded that the great value of the printing press in making knowledge cheap is particularly shown It is probable that the first printers did not take off more than two or three hundred of so many, of their works, and, therefore, the earliest printed books must have been still dear, on account of the limited number of their readers CAXTON, as it appears by a passage in one of his books, was a ~~cautious~~ printer, and required something like an assurance that he should sell enough of any particular book to repay the cost of producing it In his 'Legends of Saints,' he says, "I have submysed (submitted) myself to translate into English the Saints of Legend,' called 'Legenda aurea' in Lati and William Earl of Arundel, sent me worshipful gentleman, promising that my said lord should, during my life, give and grant to me a yearly fee, that is to note, a buck in summer and a doe in winter, me — and promised to take a table quantity of them — and

1 Is the mark for changing the wrong letter in the word process
2 To substitute one word for another
3 and 24 The first is the method of marking a short insertion, the second of marking a long one
4 To have a space put between the two words | 5 To turn a letter which has been placed upside down
6 To close the word in which a space has been improperly left
7 and 8 To take away (dele blot out) a superfluous letter or word
9 12 and 22 Different marks for transposing the arrangement of letters, words or sentences
10. To have no fresh paragraph | 11 To substitute a comma for a full point or period
13. To commence a new paragraph | 14 19 21 and 27. To insert points and marks of quotation
15 To have any particular part printed in Italic
16 To have words or letters printed in 'lower case,' or small letters Roman is always understood unless otherwise directed
17. To have a word remain, which has been accidentally or erroneously marked Stet is the Latin for "let it stand.
18 Points out a letter which does not match with the others, a 'wrong fount'
20 and 23. To have certain parts printed in small or full capitals.
25 To set straight whatever may stand crooked
26 To remove the unnecessary black mark between the words, which arises from what should form the space not having been pushed down.

METRIC WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

See also "Double Conversion Tables for Weights and Measures

In addition to the Imperial standard weights and measures the use of the French or Metric system of weights and measures was made permissive in Great Britain in 1897

In the Metric system the standard of length is the METRE the standard of weight is the KILOGRAM, and the standard of capacity is the LITRE Accurate copies of the Metre Kilogram and Litre are kept in the custody of the Standards Office of the Board of Trade

10 millimetres = 1 centimetre = 0 39370113 inch (mm) (cm)
10 centimetres = 1 decimetre = 3 9370113 inches (dm)
10 decimetres = 1 METRE (m) = 1 0936143 yards
10 metres = 1 dekametre = 10 936143 yards (dam)
10 dekametres = 1 hectometre = 109 36143 yards (hm)
10 hectometres = 1 kilometre = 0 62137 mile (km)

A kilometre is approximately five eighths of a mile, so that 8 kilometres may be regarded by pedestrians as 5 miles

2.—MEASURES OF WEIGHT

10 milligrams = 1 centigram = 0 15432 grains (mg) (cg)
10 centigrams = 1 decigram = 1 5432 ,, (dg)
10 decigrams = 1 gramme = 15 4323 ,, (grm)
10 grammes = 1 dekagram = 5 6438 drams (dag)
10 dekagrams = 1 hectogram = 3 5274 oz (hg)
10 hectograms = 1 KILOGRAM = 2 2046223 lb (kg)
10 kilograms = 1 myriagram = 22 046223 lb
10 myriagrams = 1 quintal (q) = 1 9684 cwt
10 quintals = 1 tonne (t) = 0 9842 ton

3.—MEASURES OF CAPACITY

10 millilitres = 1 centilitre = 0 0704 gill (ml) (cl)
10 centilitres = 1 decilitre (dl) = 0 17598 pint
10 decilitres = 1 LITRE (lit) = 1 7598 pints
10 litres = 1 dekalitre = 2 1997 gals (dal)
10 dekalitres = 1 hectolitre = 2 7497 bushels (hl)

1 cubic cm (water) = 1 gram, 1,000 cubic cm (water) or 1 litre = 1 kilogram 1 cubic metre (1,000 litres, 1,000 kilograms) = 1 metric ton

4.—MEASURES OF LAND

100 sq metres = 1 are (a) = 0 0988 rood
100 ares = 1 hectare (ha) = 2 4711 acres
100 hectares = 1 sq kilometre = 0 38611 sq mile

NOTES.

1 hectolitre = 2 75 bushels
1 hectolitre per hectare = 1 11 bushels per acre.
1 quintal = 3 67 bushels
1 quintal per hectare = 1 49 bushels per acre
1 franc a hectolitre = 3 6*d* a bushel (par)
1 ,, a quintal = { 4 3*d* a cental (par) / 1*s* 3*d* a quarter (par)
1 franc ,, (duty) ... = 1*s* 8*d* a quarter (par)

THE UNITED STATES.

Weight—In the short ton of 2,000 lb, the Cental of 100 lb takes the place of the Cwt in the long ton There are TWO tons therefore, the long ton of 2 240 lb the short ton of 2 000 lb

Capacity—For grain the old bushel of 2,150 42 cubic inches its gallon = 268 8 cubic inches This is commonly called the Winchester bushel though really of the slightly different London standard

For liquids the old wine gallon of 231 cubic inches five sixths of the British gallon and = 58 317 8 grains of water It is divided into 8 pints = 7,289 7 grains of water = 16 6 Imperial ounces In medicine the pint is divided into 16 fluid ounces = 455 6 grains of water, and the ounce into 8 fluid drachms of 60 minims

BRITISH DOMINIONS

Australia and New Zealand—Same as British Canada—Same as British but with short ton of 2,000 lb, as in U S A Newfoundland—Same as British

Channel Islands

The weights and measures in use in the Channel Islands are those of Great Britain the cental of 100 lb being used as well as the cwt of 112 lb The Old Island Measures are as follows —

	Jersey	Guernsey
Vergée (Normandy rood)	= 0 44 acre	0 4 acre
Bushel	= 8 9 gallons	5 8 gallons
Pound	= 7 561 grains	7 623 grains
Cwt (104 lb)	= 112 3 lb	(100 lb) = 108 9 lb

British India

Ungul		= 0 75 inch
Guz usually 33 inches	also the yard
Koss		= 2 000 yards
Bigha (Bengal)	usually	= 0 625 acre
Cawny (Madras)		= 1 33 ,,
Tola (rupee weight)		= 180 grains
Chittak		= 2 0571 oz
Seer, 16 chittak or 80 tolas		= 2 0571 lb
Maund 40 seers		= 82 284 lb
,, (Bombay)		= 27 864 lb
,, (Madras)		= 24 68 lb
Seer (Liquid)		= 1 760 pints
Candy ,,		= 500 lb
Visham = 3 lb Dangali		= 3 pints
Parah		= 15 gallons
Catty (Singapore)		= 1⅓ lb
Pikul ,,	100 catties	= 133 lb

Irish Free State—Same as British

Malta

The Metric System
Old Maltese Measures

1 Palmo = 10 3125 inches
8 Palmi = 1 canna = 6 ft 10½ inches
1 sq Canna = 47 26 sq feet
256 sq Canna = 1 tumulo = 6 mondelli = 12 100 sq feet
1 mondello = 10 misure
1 acre = 3 tumuli 3 mondelli, 6 misure.

Sudan—See Egypt

South Africa

The Metric System is compulsory in the case of chemists and is permissible (along with British weights and measures) in other cases In addition, the following old Dutch measures are still used—Liquid Measure Leaguer=about 128 imperial gallons, half aum = 15¾ imperial gallons, anker = 7½ imperial gallons Capacity Muid = 3 bushels The general surface measure is Morgen, equal to 2 116402 acres, 1,000 Cape lineal feet are equal to 1,033 British feet The short ton of 2,000 lb is used.

FOREIGN WEIGHTS AND MEASURES

The Metric System has been adopted by the whole of Europe (except Great Britain) and is permissive in all countries

China

Tael weight	= 1 33 oz	Ch ih	= 1 175 feet
Catty ,,	= 1 33 lb	Chang	= 11 75 feet
Picul ,,	= 133 33 lb	Li	= 2,115 feet.
Ts un	= 1 41 inches

Egypt

The Metric System of Weights and Measures and the foot and pound and their multiples are legal in Egypt The foot and pound are rarely used and the Metric System is little known except in the large towns

The Weights and Measures in common use with their British equivalents are as follows —

Length—

Dira Baladi (used for piece goods)= 29 83 inches
Dira Mamari, or Pic (used by architects) = 29 53 inches
Qasaba (used for agricultural land)= 11 65 feet

Area—

1 Qirat=209 3 sq yards 1 Fed dan (=24 qirats)= 1 038 acres

Capacity—

1 Kéla = 0 454 bushel 1 Ardeb (=12 kelas) = 5 444 bushels

Weight—

1 Rotl = 0 99 lb 1 Oke = 2 75 lb 1 Qantar (= 100 rotls) = 99 05 lb

A Qantar of unginned cotton = 315 lb of ginned cotton = 100 lb an Ardeb of wheat = 150 kilogrammes of barley = 120 kilogrammes of beans = 155 kilogramme of maize = 140 kilogrammes of whole lentils = 157 kilogrammes of split lentils = 132 kilogrammes

EXAMPLE 1.—What is the present value of a lease having 37 years to run of the net annual value of £100 interest being reckoned at 4 per cent ANSWER.—19 14 years purchase or £1 914

EXAMPLE 2. A man aged 54 in the receipt of a pension or annuity of £100 a year net wishes to commute that for a present payment interest being reckoned at 5 per cent How much will he receive ANSWER. Looking at the Table of Expectation of Life (q v) it will be seen that the expectation for age 54 is about 17 years, and from the above table an annuity certain for 17 years interest at 5 per cent is worth 11 27 years purchase The present payment required would therefore be £1 127 approximately

Note to Example 2.—This method is only approximate The values of annuities which depend on lives of a given present age when properly calculated according to a given mortality table and a given rate of interest are always somewhat less than those given by the method used in this example

REPAYMENT OF PUBLIC LOANS.

SUMS needed annually for the liquidation of a debt (principal and interest) of £100, at the stated percentage, in 5 to 80 years. If the loan be for £1 000, each annual instalment must be multiplied by 10, and so on Thus, a Municipal Loan of £1,000,000 at 5 per cent, repayable in 80 years, would cost the ratepayers £51,031 5s annually for that period, and would then be extinguished

REDEMPTION OF CAPITAL

BY ANNUAL PAYMENTS

THE following are the rates charged by certain first class Insurance Companies for "Redemption Policies, to secure the payment of £100 in return for so many annual premiums, e g, an Insurance Company will undertake to pay £100 on Midsummer Day, 1951, in return for the payment of £2 5*s* 2*d* on Midsummer Day, 1923 and each year afterwards until 1950, or 28 payments in all, for £1,000 the annual premium would be £22 11*s* 8*d*, and so on This table is of particular interest to purchasers of Leasehold property, as it enables such purchasers to see at a glance, the amount to be paid out of the income from the property for a redemption policy to provide the sum originally expended (with a margin for dilapidations, if necessary), by the time the leasehold interest has expired

THE RULE OF THE ROAD.

The Rule of the Road is a paradox quite,
For in driving your carriage along,
If you bear to the left you are sure to go right,
If you bear to the right you go wrong

But in walking the streets 'tis a different case,
To the right it is right you should steer,
On the left should be left enough of clear space
For the people who wish to walk there

THE WALKER'S MAXIMS

(From The Times, April 9, 1930)

Two rules the walker must obey
If he would reach his home to day—
On Roadway always keep the Right
On Footpath just the op po site

G BUCKSTON BROWNE.

THE RULE OF THE ROAD AT SEA

1 Two steamships meeting

When both side lights you see ahead,
Port your helm, and show your RED

2 Two steamships passing

GREEN to GREEN, or RED to RED,
Perfect safety—Go a head!

3 Two steamships crossing

If to your starboard RED appear,
It is your duty to keep clear,
To act as judgment says is proper —
To Port—or Starboard—Back, or Stop her

But when upon your port is seen
A Steamer s starboard light of GREEN,
There s not so much for you to do,
For GREEN to Port keeps clear of you.

Both in safety and in doubt,
Always keep a good look-out,
In danger, with no room to turn,
Ease her—stop her—go astern.

The 1921 Census in Scotland showed longevity both of males and females less than England and Wales at all ages ranging from 2 54 years and 3 23 years at birth to fractions of a year at later ages but while at every age women's longevity exceeds that of men in Scotland the excess is much less marked than in England

In Ireland up to 1911 when the last Census was taken of the whole country as one the longevity of males up to 25 and over 85 years was less than in England but between ages 25 and 85 was greater than in England Of females the Irish longevity was consistently less than that of England except for the ages 55 to 75 when they exceeded the English averages The Census taken in Northern Ireland in 1926 after 15 years interval and five years later than the English Census showed remarkable improvements over that of 1911 as regards longevity and again high figures for males of 55 and over were repeated though less prominently England having improved in the decade of years 1911 1921

GEOGRAPHICAL DISTRIBUTION.—The British Empire occupies over one quarter of the known surface of the globe, and its population exceeds one quarter of the estimated number of the human race. The total area is distributed almost equally over the Northern and Southern Hemispheres, but more than two thirds lie in the Eastern and less than one third in the Western Hemisphere.

ETHNOLOGY.—The estimated white population of the Dominions in 1931 was 70,000,000 mainly British and Irish, but partly French, Dutch and Spanish. The remaining 380 000,000 include 315 000 000 of the native races of India and Ceylon, 40 000,000 black races, 6 000,000 Arabs, 6 000,000 Malays, 1,000,000 Chinese and 1,000 000 Polynesians, with various other elements, including 100,000 "Red Indians" in Canada.

RELIGIONS.—Of the total population over 210 000 000 are Hindus, 100 000,000 Muhammadans, 80,000,000 Christians (67 000 000 Protestants, 13,000 000 Catholics), 12,000,000 Buddhists, 12,000 000 Animists, 4,000 000 Sikhs, Jains and Parsees, 750 000 Jews and the remainder Polytheists and Idol worshippers.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT.—There is no fundamental law upon which the Constitution of the British Empire rests, but there are three main principles underlying its administration, viz., self government, self support, and self defence. The first of these principles has been applied for many years, and is fully developed in the case of Canada, Newfoundland, Australia, New Zealand, the Union of South Africa, and the Irish Free State. The second principle is equally developed, almost every unit being financially self supporting, and few requiring aid from the central Government. The third principle is of modern growth, and may be said to be the outcome of the Imperial Conference.

THE IMPERIAL CONFERENCE.—The origin of the Imperial Conference may be traced to the presence in London (in 1887) of the Prime Ministers of the various Dominions, at the celebrations of the Jubilee of Queen Victoria. Similar gatherings took place in London in 1897, 1902, 1907 and 1911, and in 1907 the title of "Colonial" Conference was changed to Imperial Conference. At the earlier meetings the Colonial Secretary presided, but with the change of title additional importance was given to the assembly by the assumption of the Presidency by the Prime Minister of Great Britain. In 1917 and 1918 the Conference, which was held concurrently with the sessions of the Imperial War Cabinet, was called the Imperial War Conference, and was held under the Chairmanship of the Secretary of State for the Colonies. In 1921, the Premiers' Conference, under the Presidency of the Prime Minister of Great Britain, discussed all matters of general interest to the Empire as a whole. The constitution of the Conference, which again met in 1923, 1926 and 1930, is as follows.—The Prime Ministers and other Ministers of the United Kingdom, Canada, Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand, Union of South Africa, the Irish Free State, and Newfoundland, the Secretary of State for India and other representatives of India. The Secretariat of the Conference is provided by the Governments represented.

SELF GOVERNMENT.—(1) Great Britain.—The Constitution recognises certain great principles including the fair administration of justice, the prohibition of taxation without the consent of the people and a limited monarchy, the power of the monarch being in effect, wielded by a Ministry supported by a majority of the House of Commons, the members of which House are elected on a wide franchise, exercised by electors of both sexes. The component parts of the British Government are the King, the Legislature (House of Lords and House of Commons), the Executive, appointed by the Sovereign and responsible to Parliament, and the Judicature.

(2) The Indian Empire.—India is governed by the King as Emperor, acting on the advice of the Secretary of State for India, who is assisted by a Council whose members are appointed by the Secretary of State. The latter is responsible to, and represents the authority of, Parliament. Subject to the Secretary of State's direction, the supreme executive authority in India is the Governor General and his Executive Council, with a legislature of two houses, the Council of State of 60 members (of whom not more than 20 are government officials), and the Legislative Assembly of 145 members (26 official).

(3) Imperial Dominions.—All British Dominions are subject (except as regards taxation) to the legislation of the British Parliament, but no Act of Parliament affects a Dominion unless that Dominion is specially mentioned. If the legislature of a Dominion enacts a law which is repugnant to an Imperial law affecting the Dominion, it is to the extent to which it is repugnant absolutely void Dominion legislatures may be controlled by the refusal of the Governor's assent to any measure passed by reservation of a measure for the consideration of the Crown and refusal of the Crown's assent by a suspensory clause and the refusal of the Royal assent Subject to such control the parliament of a self governing Dominion exercises within its borders all the ordinary powers of a sovereign assembly The Imperial Dominions may be divided into four classes according to the way in which they are governed —

(a) Those having Dominion Status Where 'Dominion Status' is enjoyed the executive is entrusted to political chiefs who are responsible not merely or mainly to the Crown but to the elected legislature of the Dominion The Dominions thus governed are Canada Newfoundland Australia New Zealand the Union of South Africa and the Irish Free State Malta Southern Rhodesia and Northern Rhodesia have 'responsible government, but certain powers are reserved

(b) Where there is government by legislature assembly wholly or partly elected and an executive council nominated by the Crown or the Governor representing the Crown In this class may be placed the Bahamas Barbados Bermuda, British Guiana Jamaica, Leeward Islands, and Mauritius

(c) Where there is government by a Governor acting with an executive and a legislative council, the councils being nominated by the Crown or a Governor representing the Crown Dominions so governed include Ceylon Falkland Islands Fiji Gambia Gibraltar Nigeria St Vincent Sierra Leone Straits Settlements Tanganyika, Trinidad

(d) Wherein both legislative and executive powers are vested in the Governor alone In this class are Labuan and St Helena where power is also reserved to the Crown to legislate by Order in Council In South Africa Bechuanaland Basutoland and Swaziland are governed in substantially the same way but no power is reserved to the Crown

(e) Protectorates The protectorates are countries which as regards their foreign relations are under the exclusive control of the Crown The protectorates of the British Empire include Kenya, Nyasaland Somaliland Swaziland Uganda

(f) Spheres of Influence A sphere of influence may be described as an area wherein other Powers undertake not to attempt to acquire influence or territory by treaty or annexation such British spheres exist in the Persian Gulf and in Arabia

(g) Mandatory Spheres where the responsibility for securing good government and a reasonable development of natural resources is confided to an already established government by mandate from the League of Nations Such British spheres are parts of the former German Colonies in West Africa and the former Turkish governments of Palestine and Mesopotamia.

SELF SUPPORT —With but few exceptions the British Dominions are self supporting revenue being raised locally to meet the expenditure Occasional grants are made by the Central Government to meet exceptional expenditure or in aid of administration in the earlier stages of development Certain capital expenses are also undertaken from time to time by the Central Authority e.g., the Nigerian purchase, the Uganda Railway, &c No taxes are imposed on the subjects of a Dominion or Colony by the Central Government as such subjects are not directly represented in the British House of Commons this principle No taxation without representation was the mainspring of the revolt in the North American Colonies at the close of the eighteenth century Since that disastrous attempt to impose taxes without the consent of the taxpayers the principle which had for many years been accepted in Great Britain has become an accepted maxim of British Overseas administration

SELF DEFENCE —The Dominions generally provide for the defence of their immediate area but the general strategical defence of the Empire is undertaken by the Central Government Questions affecting general strategical defence are considered and determined by the Imperial Defence Committee, which co ordinates the work of the sea land and air forces In the Great War of 1914 1918 the Dominions provided Armies or Contingents which fought in every area and bore a full share of the sacrifices by which victory was achieved The land and air forces of the Dominions are maintained at the expense of the Dominions concerned The amounts provided for Naval Defence in the estimates of the under mentioned parts of the Empire for the year 1930 31 are as follows — Great Britain £51 739 000 Canada $3 600 000 Australia £1 778 633 New Zealand £675 480 (including £125 000 as a contribution towards the Naval Base at Singapore and £100 000 interest and sinking fund on account of H M S New Zealand) Union of South Africa £78 560 The proportion of expenditure on Naval Defence to the total Import and Export trade of these parts of the Empire is as follows Great Britain 3 04 per cent Canada 0 15 per cent Australia 1 06 per cent New Zealand 0 77 per cent Union of South Africa 0 043 per cent Per caput of population the expenditure is Great Britain £1 2s 7d Canada 36 cents Australia 5s 6d New Zealand 9s 1d Union of South Africa (European population only) 10s 4d As regards Colonies not possessing responsible governments contributions to Imperial Defence are paid to the War Office

THE LEGISLATURE The Parliament of Great Britain is the supreme legislative authority of the Empire This Parliament has, with the consent of the King Emperor, delegated its legislative authority to other parliaments constituted by itself while retaining a general supervision of Imperial affairs The Secretaries of State for the Dominions and Colonies are Cabinet Ministers their active participation in the government of the nations of the Empire decreasing with the measure of self government accorded to each Parliament also exercises a control over Indian affairs through a Secretary of State

THE JUDICATURE —The Supreme Judicial Authority of the Empire is the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council before which appeals may be brought (in the form of a petition to the Crown) from Consular Courts and Courts of Vice Admiralty and from the Courts of India and every British Dominion The Committee (see p 332) consists of such members of the Privy Council as have held or are holding high judicial office, provision being made for the inclusion of representatives of India and the self governing Dominions India and the Dominions have each a judicial system, with judges appointed by the Crown The Supreme Judicial Authority for Great Britain and Northern Ireland is the House of Lords

EDUCATION —Universities (see pp 406–417) and University Colleges have been established and degrees are conferred Under the will of Cecil Rhodes scholarships were founded at Oxford, his old University for students from the British Dominions and Colonies, the United States of America, and Germany Rhodes Scholarships, of the annual value of £400 tenable at any college at Oxford, are awarded in each of the United States, in each State or Province of Canada Australia and South Africa (where there are also scholarships for Rhodesia and for certain towns and schools in Cape Colony), in New Zealand, Newfoundland, Jamaica, Bermuda and Malta. The normal number in residence together is about 196, of whom 100 come from the British Empire and 96 from America. Secretary to the Rhodes Trustees, The Marquess of Lothian C H 17, Waterloo Place, London, S W 1 Oxford Secretary, Prof C K Allen, M A , Rhodes House, Oxford

Statistics issued by the Universities Bureau of the British Empire show that the total number of students from overseas attending Universities and Colleges in the United Kingdom at the beginning of the 1929–30 session was 5,486, of whom 995 are from Africa, 1 071 from America, 2,282 from Asia, 794 from Europe, and 344 from the Pacific The principal figures are India, Burma, and Ceylon 1,846, United States 621 South Africa and Rhodesia 531, Egypt, 366, Australia, 223, Canada and Newfoundland, 233, Germany 163, China, 143 West Indies 140, New Zealand, 118, Russia 64 France, 63 Japan, 61, Netherlands 46 Poland, 44, Switzerland, 43, Siam, 42, Norway, 32, Hungary, 31, Spain, 30

The Davison Scholarships, established in 1923 have been withdrawn

The Prince of Wales's Scholarships (founded 1932)—Two scholarships tenable for two years at Oxford University by selected students of the University of Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Under The Commonwealth Fund (the Fuller Building 41 East 57th Street, New York, U S A) established in 1918 by Mrs Stephen V Harkness there are available for candidates of British descent 40 Fellowships, of an annual value of approximately £600 each, tenable for two years at certain American Universities They may be awarded as follows

1 Thirty Fellowships open to men and women, unmarried, under thirty years of age, domiciled in England, Scotland, Wales or Ireland, and graduates of recognised universities therein,

2 Ten Fellowships for (a) candidates from the British Dominions, graduates of a University of a British Dominion or Colony, men or women, unmarried, under thirty years of age, who have studied, but not necessarily graduated, at a British University and (b) candidates who hold an appointment under the British Government, or the Government of a British Dominion, Colony, Protectorate, or Mandated Territory, or the Government of India They may be single or married, but must not be more than thirty-five years of age on September 1 of the year of award At least five of these ten Fellowships are open to candidates from the Government Service.

FINANCE —Complete financial autonomy is enjoyed, in fact, by all British Dominions, and customs tariffs are in most cases the principal source of revenue The tariffs are generally lower for merchandise of British origin than for importations from foreign countries There is no Imperial Debt, but certain obligations of Crown Colonies and Protectorates are met in the early stages of then development by the central Government and occasional grants in aid of revenue are also made at need Advances so made and still outstanding are shown under the heading 'National Debt (see Index)

Stocks authorised under the Colonial Stock Act 1900 are Trustee Securities, and the price at which some of them may be obtained is shown on p 567

PRODUCTION —Canada, India, Australia, and Great Britain are the principal wheat producing units and Mesopotamia (with irrigation) has great potentialities Barley, oats, rice and maize, and tea, coffee and rubber are largely cultivated, while more than half the world's output of cocoa was produced in British Dominions Cane sugar is produced in India (for local consumption) West Indies, Australia New Zealand, Natal, and Mauritius and beet sugar in Canada and elsewhere Fruit is grown in most of the Dominions and figures largely in the sales of the London Fruit Exchange (Spitalfields) Meat is produced in large quantities in New Zealand, Australia and South Africa Australia and New Zealand are the greatest wool producing countries of the world, and the output of coal in Great Britain exceeds that of every country except the U S A , coal is also abundant in Australia Canada, India and South Africa Cotton is extensively grown in India, West Africa East Africa Sudan, West Indies and in the tropical parts of Australia, chemical and mechanical wood pulp for paper making is extensively produced in Canada and Newfoundland Iron ore is found in many of the Dominions, and pig iron is largely produced, tin is produced mainly within the Commonwealth (particularly in the Malay peninsula), while 70 per cent of the world's supply of gold is drawn from South and South West Africa Australia New Zealand and Canada it is produced also in Borneo, British East Africa, British Guiana, Ceylon, India Malay States Sarawak, Sudan and West Africa Precious stones are found in various parts of the Commonwealth, South Africa producing the principal supply of diamonds, and India of rubies and emeralds Petroleum is produced in India, Trinidad and Canada, and there are vast resources available at Mosul (Mesopotamia) and in the neighbourhood of the Persian Gulf

§ CENSUS POPULATION OF THE BRITISH ISLANDS.

Previous to 1801 there existed no official return of the population of either England or Scotland, nor was it till 1813 that statesmen had anything more than surmise to guide them respecting Ireland, and the census then taken of that country was far from correct. The estimate formed of the English population at various periods, calculated from the numbers of baptisms, burials, and marriages, was in the years—

1570	4,160,221	1670	5,773,646
1600	4,811,718	1700	6,045,008
1630	5,600,517	1750	6,517,035

The first general Census of Great Britain and Ireland was taken in 1801, and since the time named there has been a fresh numbering every ten years, with the following results.

1801..	16,345,646	1871	31,629,299
1811	18,509,116	1881	35,026,108

 The population of Great Britain and Ireland a month before the outbreak of the Great War was officially estimated at 46,089,249. The number of persons to the square mile was in 1921: England and Wales, 649, Scotland, 164, Ireland (1911), 135 6.

CENTRAL GOVERNMENT.

THE BRITISH CONSTITUTION.—The British Constitution is mainly unwritten and customary, but its development is marked by certain outstanding and fundamental laws, of which the principal are Magna Carta (1215), which secured annual parliaments and the equal administration of justice; the Habeas Corpus Act (1679), securing the liberty of the person; the Act of Settlement (1701), providing for the Protestant succession to the throne; the Act of Union with Scotland (1707), the Act of Union with Ireland (1800), the Parliament Act (1911), which enabled the Commons to pass certain Acts without the concurrence of the other chamber; the Government of Ireland Act (1920), and the Irish Free State (Agreement) Act, 1922.

The constituent parts of the British Constitution may be thus briefly described:

1 The Sovereign.—The throne is hereditary in the British house of Windsor with mixed succession, the sons of the Sovereign and their descendants having precedence of daughters but daughters and their descendants preference over lateral lines. The Monarchy is constitutional and limited. The King has a right to veto Bills passed by both Houses of Parliament, but in practice his veto is almost obsolete. 'The King can do no wrong' is a maxim of the Constitution, and consequently no action for civil wrong will lie against the Crown. A petition of right will, however, enable an injured subject to obtain redress, while, if in the administration of an Act of Parliament a Government department exceeds its rights, declaration of right may be obtained in an action against the Attorney General.

2 The Legislature.—Parliament consists of two Houses, the Lords and the Commons.

(a) The House of Lords consists of peers. A peer may hold his seat by (1) hereditary right, (2) creation by the King, (3) official position or election. English bishops (24) Irish peers (28) elected for life and Scottish peers (16) elected for duration of Parliament, also sit in the House of Lords.

The powers of the House of Lords were much restricted by the Parliament Act, 1911. Thus, if a Money Bill is not passed unamended by the House of Lords within a month of its being sent up, it becomes law upon the Royal assent being signified. A Public Bill other than a Money Bill will become law without the consent of the Lords if it is passed by the Commons, and sent up to the Lords, in three successive sessions, provided two years elapse between the date of the second reading in the Commons in the first session and the date when it is passed by that body in the third session. Passing a Bill with amendments by the House of Lords is equivalent to rejection, unless the Commons approve the amendments. Any Bill by which the maximum duration of Parliament is increased is excepted from this Act. Members of the House of Lords are unpaid.

(b) The House of Commons.—This body consists of 615 members, elected by the registered male and female electors in county, borough, and university constituencies. Practically all persons over 21 years of age are qualified to vote at elections. The maximum duration of Parliament is five years. Members of the House of Commons receive annual salaries of £400 and travelling facilities over the railways to and from their constituencies.

3 The Executive.—The Crown (the King in Council) "makes peace and war, issues charters, increases the peerage, is the fountain of honour, of office and of justice." The Cabinet, under the presidency of the Prime Minister, consists of Ministers drawn from the ranks of the party in power and appointed by the Sovereign on the advice of the Prime Minister. Ministers receive salaries of varying amounts (see page 253). The Cabinet has no corporate existence. Ministers are severally responsible to Parliament for their actions and the Cabinet as a whole is responsible to Parliament for its joint and several administration. Ministers hold their office during the Sovereign's pleasure, they may be dismissed at any moment.

4 The Judicature.—(a) England and Wales.—The laws in England and Wales are administered by judges appointed by the Crown, who hold office for life and cannot be removed save on petition presented by both Houses of Parliament. Two Courts of Appeal hear appeals from the High Court, the ultimate Court of Appeal from all the courts in Great Britain being the House of Lords. Civil cases arising in London and Middlesex are tried at the High Court in London, but civil cases arising in the country are tried on circuit by judges of the King's Bench at the Assizes. The Chancery division has exclusive jurisdiction to try certain classes of actions. To the County Courts is relegated the duty of trying actions where the sum in dispute does not exceed a certain amount. The County Courts, too, have jurisdiction to try cases arising under certain special Acts of Parliament e.g., the Workmen's Compensation Act. Bankruptcy cases arising in London are heard in the London Bankruptcy Court; those arising out of London are dealt with in the County Courts.

With regard to criminal law it is a general principle that, except for certain minor offences, every person charged is entitled to be tried by a jury. Courts of criminal jurisdiction in England are (1) The judges of the High Court sitting at Assizes for the trial of cases out of London and at the Central Criminal Court ("The Old Bailey," see p. 334) for the trial of cases arising in and around London. (2) Courts of Quarter Sessions, holden for every county, and formed of justices of the peace, presided over by a chairman. The recorders of certain cities and boroughs have a jurisdiction similar to that of courts of Quarter Sessions. (3) Courts of Petty Sessions, consisting of at least two justices of the peace or a stipendiary magistrate. (4) The Court of Criminal Appeal has power to hear appeals against convictions and sentences.

(b) Scotland.—Scots civil law is administered by the Court of Session, which is a court of law and equity. The High Court of Justiciary is the supreme criminal court in Scotland. It consists of all the judges, and as a rule it is confined to the trial of serious cases. The Sheriff of the county (see p. 340) exercises functions which correspond to those of the English County Court Judges and the Chairmen of Quarter Sessions. Burgh magistrates and justices of the peace have jurisdiction in petty cases.

(c) Northern Ireland.—The higher courts in Northern Ireland are very similar to the English courts, but the County Court Judges are also the Chairmen of Quarter Sessions.

RELIGIONS AND LANGUAGES

Religions and Languages—The inhabitants of Great Britain and Ireland are almost entirely Christians, the exceptions being about 300,000 Jews and a small number of non Christian immigrants In England the Church of England (with an Episcopal form of Government), and in Scotland the Church of Scotland (with a Presbyterian form of Government), are the 'Established Religions The Church was disestablished in Ireland in 1869, and in Wales in 1920 There has been no religious census since 1851, but many of the religious bodies publish estimates of membership, and estimated figures for 1929 will be found on p 384 The language of the people is English, with a large proportion of Welsh speaking people in Wales, many of whom are bilingual Attempts are being made to revive the Gaelic language in the Irish Free State Gaelic is still spoken in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, there being 7 069 persons speaking Gaelic only (Ross and Cromarty 3,435 Inverness 3 123, Argyll 335, other counties 176) and 137,149 speaking Gaelic and English at the Census of 1931.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

Local Government is carried out under the central control of the Ministry of Health (which superseded the various Local Government Boards in 1919) The subjects which local bodies administer are, inter alia education, the poor law, public health police the control of the sale of intoxicating liquors, the provision of lunatic asylums The ruling principle has been to entrust special interests to those specially interested In England and Wales there are elective Councils for each Administrative County (under Chairmen), for each City and Borough (under Lord Mayors or Mayors), and for Urban and Rural Districts (under Chairmen) every parish being thus included Scotland has elective County Councils under a Convener, Burgh Councils under a Lord Provost or Provost, or Parish Councils with Chairmen.

POLICE.

The strength of the Police force was 58,080 in England and Wales (1930), 6,621 in Scotland (1930), and 2,859 in Northern Ireland (1930). The Police of England and Wales are administered by the Home Office, those of Scotland by the Scottish Office The LONDON POLICE consists of the City Police and of the Metropolitan Police The City Police district comprises an area of 675 statute acres and contains two courts of justice those of the Guildhall and Mansion House, where the Lord Mayor and the Aldermen are the magistrates (see p 337) Although the area is comparatively small, the rateable value is enormous The night population is 10,896, but the day (or working) population is 436,721 The Force under the Commissioner comprises 1 Assistant Commissioner, 3 Superintendents, 7 Chief Inspectors, 25 Inspectors, 17 Sub Inspectors, 125 Sergeants and 983 Constables, also 18 Constables on private service duty The City of London Police Reserve (Headquarters, Bunhill Row, E C 1) numbered 3,266 all ranks in Oct 1931

The Metropolitan Police district embraces an area of 447,686 statute acres, with a population of about eight millions There are within this area fourteen Police Courts (see p. 338). The Force on Sept 4, 1932, consisted of 32 Superintendents, 740 Inspectors, 2,821 Sergeants, and 16 909 Constables, making a total of 20,502, with 214 horses The strength of the Metropolitan Special Constabulary Reserve and its Auxiliary Force on Sept 4, 1932, was 21,129 The gross expenditure of the Metropolitan Police and Metropolitan Police Courts for the year 1931 32 was £8 654 379 On March 31, 1932, there were 14,341 Police pensioners, and 1,486 pensioned widows and 460 children

§ 'Self Balancing Revenue and Expenditure omitted from 1929 30
* Budget Estimate (a) April 19 1932

THE BUDGET, 1932–1933

The Budget for 1932 1933 was introduced on April 19, 1932, by the Chancellor of the Exchequer (Mr Neville Chamberlain) The financial year 1931 1932 ended with a realised surplus of £364 000 (see pp 258 9) Customs and Excise yielded £3,000,000 more than the Budget figure, but there was a large fall in the yield of Death Duties and Stamps Income Tax yielded £15,400,000 more and Sur Tax nearly £4 000 000 more than was anticipated Mr Chamberlain estimated the necessary Expenditure for 1932–1933 at £766,000,000 and the Revenue at £764,300,000 To meet the deficiency of £1 700,000 the Chancellor of the Exchequer reimposed the duty on tea (which was remitted in 1929) at 4*d* per lb (with 2*d* preferential rate for British Dominions and Colonies) and altered certain of the duties on sugar, molasses, glucose, saccharin and silk Certain other changes were also proposed in motor vehicle duties On the revised basis a deficit of £2,800,000 was met by the prospective yield from tea (£3 600 000) and on adjustment there was a prospective surplus of £796 000 for contingencies

Notes on Income Tax.

Under the Finance Act of 1920 a radical alteration was made in the method of granting relief in the Income Tax in favour of earned income as compared with investment income, and in the method of graduating the burden of the tax according to the size of a taxpayer's income and his family responsibilities The previously existing exemptions abatements and reliefs were replaced by the various reliefs set out below In introducing the new system the Act employed two terms not previously used in connection with the Income Tax viz, 'assessable income and 'taxable income

"Assessable Income means, in the case of "earned income, the amount of such income as computed for Income Tax purposes, after deducting the amount of the "earned income allowance mentioned below and in the case of other income, the actual amount of such income as computed for Income Tax purposes

"Taxable Income" means that part of the "assessable income' upon which Income Tax is actually charged, that is, the "assessable income less the various deductions referred to below

Deduction in arriving at Assessable Income Earned Income Allowance.—The differentiation in favour of "earned income is made by deducting one fifth of the "earned income in order to arrive at the assessable income The deduction is given irrespective of the amount of the total income but must not exceed £300 for any one individual The "assessable income of a tax payer is, therefore, his total income, as computed for Income Tax purposes after making the appropriate deduction in respect of any "earned income

An allowance is made of one fifth of the total income (from whatever source) of persons of the age of 65 years and upwards whose total income does not exceed £500 This allowance is granted, in the case of a married couple, where either the husband or his wife, living with him, has attained the age of 65 years at the commencement of the year of assessment, but the joint total income must in such a case fall within the prescribed limits Provision is also made for marginal relief, in order to avoid the hardship which would be involved when the total income falls just over the prescribed limit of £500

Total Exemption.—Exemption from tax may be claimed where the total assessable income does not exceed £100, or in the case of an individual whose wife is living with him, £150 Where the income is wholly earned, these limits are equivalent to £125 and £187 10s respectively See above

Deductions from Assessable Income in order to arrive at Taxable Income.—Where the taxpayer is not totally exempt the following deductions may be claimed from the total assessable income in order to arrive at the 'taxable income The deductions may be claimed irrespective of the amount of the taxpayer's total income

Personal allowance may be claimed of £100, or, in the case of an individual whose wife is living with him, £150

Wife's Earned Income.—When a taxpayer's total income includes any earned income of his wife, the personal allowance of £150 is increased by a sum equal to four fifths of the amount of such earned income, subject to a maximum additional allowance of £45

Deduction for a Widower's (or Widow's) House keeper taking Charge of Children.—A deduction of £50 may be claimed, under certain conditions, by a widower who has living with him a female relative for the purpose of having the charge and care of any child or adopted child of his in respect of whom the deduction for children (see p 625) is given or in the capacity of a housekeeper or by a widow who has a female relative resident with her for the like purpose If the widower or widow proves that he or she has no such female relative who is able or willing to take such charge, the same deduction may be claimed in respect of some other female person employed for that purpose

Deduction in respect of Widowed Mother, &c, taking Charge of Children.—A deduction of £50 may be claimed, under certain conditions, by an Unmarried Person who has living with him and maintains at his own expense either his mother (being a widow or living apart from her husband) or some other female relative, for the purpose of having the charge and care of any brother or sister of his in respect of whom the deduction for children or adopted children (see p. 625) is given.

Deduction for Children —A deduction may be claimed in respect of each child, step child or adopted child under the age of 16 years or who if over that age, is receiving full time instruction at any university college, school, or other educational establishment The deduction allowable is £50 in respect of one child and £40 in respect of each additional child for whom the relief is due No deduction is however allowed in respect of any child or adopted child who is entitled in his or her own right to an income which after excluding any income to which the child is entitled as the holder of a scholarship bursary, or other similar educational endowment exceeds £50 a year

Deduction in respect of Dependent Relatives A deduction of £25 may be claimed in respect of (a) any person whom the taxpayer maintains at his own expense and who is a relative of his or of his wife and incapacitated by old age or infirmity from maintaining himself or herself or (b) his or his wife's widowed mother whether incapacitated or not or (c) a daughter who is resident with the taxpayer and upon whose services he is compelled to depend by reason of old age or infirmity The deduction under (a) or (b) is conditional however upon the income of the dependent relative not exceeding £50 a year The deduction applies in the case of a female taxpayer with the substitution of husband for wife above

Rates of Tax chargeable on the 'Taxable Income —The following provisions as to the rates of tax chargeable on the taxable income (i e that part of the income on which tax is actually charged) apply whatever the total amount of the income For the year ending April 5 1932 the first £175 of the taxable income is chargeable at 2*s* 6*d* in the £ The remainder of the taxable income is chargeable at the standard rate of tax i e at 5*s* in the £

Relief in respect of Life Assurance Premiums —Where allowance is due in respect of premiums paid for Life Assurance or for contracts for Deferred Annuities the allowance is deducted from the amount of tax arrived at under the preceding paragraph and calculated at following rates —one half the standard rate in the £ on the amount of the premium paid on policies taken out since June 22, 1916 irrespective of the claimant's total income and on policies taken out before June 22, 1916, a deduction of tax at one half the standard rate in the £ is allowed in the premiums paid by a claimant whose income does not exceed £1,000, of three fourths of the standard rate in the £ where his income exceeds £1,000 and does not exceed £2,000 and at the standard rate in the £ where his income exceeds £2,000

National Debt Redemption Fund.

This National Fund (of which Messrs Baring Brothers and Company, Ltd, 8, Bishopsgate, E C 2, are the Trustees) has no connexion with the Government—it is a purely voluntary movement to lighten the debt burden of posterity, but not that of the present generation unless there is an undreamed of accession of funds It was the expressed hope of the original donor that his contribution should serve as the nucleus of a very large fund The Fund was constituted on November 10, 1927, with a gift of £499,878 4s 11d and forty seven persons added £12 705 8s 11d in the following year There is also a further sum of £5,000 that will pass to the Fund at the conclusion of certain life interests The audited balance sheet, as at December 31, 1930, shows the following net additions during the year —Donations £205 7s 7d, profit on investments realised £3,660 0s 5d, and income £41,838 8s 11d The amount of the Fund on the 31st December, 1930, was £620 465 5s 6d Under the provisions of Clause 30 of the Finance Act, 1928, the Fund is exempt from Income Tax Estimated Assets.

Against the External Debt of £1,090,836,656 owing on March 31, 1932, may be set the amounts owing to Great Britain by certain of the British Dominions, and by various Countries in Europe The amount owed to Great Britain far exceeds the External Debt, and the total Assets have a nominal value of £2,635,418,811

The amounts remaining unpaid, and the estimated value of Investments made by the British Government in various Loans and Undertakings, are shown below (as on March 31, 1932) —

REPARATIONS PAYMENTS.

The following payments were fixed as due from Germany :—

(1) By the Reparations Commission, 1921 :— £6,600,000,000 within 30 years, equal to 30 annual payments of £220,000,000.

(2) Under the Dawes Plan, 1924 :— Average annual payments of £125,000,000

(3) Under the Young Plan, 1929 — Average annual payments of £100,000,000

£625,000,000 had been paid by Germany up to the date of the Moratorium proposed by President Hoover in 1931

From 1921-1929 the payments were shared in 92 parts, as under :—

France	52
Great Britain	22
Italy	10
Belgium .	8

From 1929-1932 a further allocation was made in 230 parts, as under —

Belgium .	20

From 1932-1963 the allocation was to have been in 276 parts :—

France .	156
Great Britain	66
Italy .	30
Belgium	24

As from July 1, 1931, President Hoover suggested to all creditor nations a moratorium of 12 months in War Debt payments (capital and interest).

At the Lausanne Conference representatives of Great Britain, France, Italy, Belgium and Germany reached agreement on July 8, 1932. Under the agreement (a) Reparations are cancelled, (b) Germany makes an eventual payment of £150,000,000 by means of bonds as from the year 1935. The bonds are deposited with the Bank for International Settlements, and may be marketed from 1935-1947, under certain safeguards for German credit, at a price not below 90. They bear interest at 5 per cent. with 1 per cent. amortisation, which will extinguish them in 37 years. This agreement became known as The Gentlemen's Agreement.

Payments due to Great Britain.

On July 14, 1931, the Chancellor of the Exchequer (Mr Snowden) circulated a written reply to a question asked in the House of Commons :—

I am circulating with the Official Report a detailed statement of the inter-Governmental payments due to his Majesty's Government in the year July 1, 1931, to June 30, 1932. It is not possible at this stage to give a statement of the debts which will actually be suspended as this will depend on the acceptance of President Hoover's proposal by the other Governments concerned and the arrangements finally made to give effect to that proposal

GREAT WAR PENSIONS

IRISH applications for compensation in respect of disablement claimed to be due to service in the Great War can no longer be entertained since the period of seven years from the date on which the claimant's active service terminated, or the date fixed (August 31 1921) as the end of the Great War, whichever is the earlier has now expired in all cases

While this is the statutory position it has been made known by announcement in the House of Commons and elsewhere that exceptional cases in which clear evidence is produced that an ex-service officer or man is suffering substantial incapacity caused by his war service in respect of which for good reason no claim was made within time will be investigated with a view to the grant of appropriate compensation

DISABLEMENT PENSION

The disablement pension is at the outset generally a temporary award based on a Medical Board's assessment of disablement arising out of injury or disease attributable to or aggravated by war service Such temporary award usually runs for a period of 12 months and is from time to time reviewed until the case is ripe for consideration for a final award under the War Pensions Act 1921 and the Regulations made thereunder Under that authority a system of final awards was brought into operation the effect of which was to stabilise pensions gradually to eliminate recurring medical examinations and to bring about finality as to the amount of pension to be awarded A man on receiving notification that a final award has been made to him, has a right of appeal subject to certain conditions to an independent Assessment Appeal Tribunal whose decision is final and binding on both the Ministry of Pensions and the appellant

At March 31, 1932 out of some 479 000 pensions in payment to disabled officers and men about 423 000 were final awards

Disablement for the purpose of pension, is assessed on a percentage scale Total disablement is reckoned at 100 per cent, and the lowest degree entitling to pension is 20 per cent Where the disablement is assessed at less than 100 per cent the disablement pension and any allowances attached thereto are proportionately reduced For instance a private 50 per cent disabled would receive 50 per cent of the full rate of pension and 50 per cent of the full rate of allowances for wife and children (if eligible)

Disablement assessed at less than 20 per cent is compensated by a gratuity or a final weekly allowance paid over a definite number of weeks

The Great War Pensions expenditure during the year ended March 31 1932 amounted to about £50 061 000 and for the current year ending March 31 1933 is estimated to amount to about £47 265 300 This will bring the aggregate expenditure of the Ministry of Pensions since 1917 and of the Service Departments from 1914 to 1917 together, to £1,063,000 000

RATES OF PENSION

The following are some of the principal rates of weekly pension for a private soldier 100 per cent disabled and of pensions or allowances for dependants of a private soldier —

Private—40s wife's allowance 10s child ren's allowances—7s 6d for first child and 6s for each other child (if there is no wife, 10s for the first 7s 6d for the second and 6s for each other child)

Widow—over 40 or with children 26s 8d under 40 and without children 20s allowances for children 10s 7s 6d 6s

Parents—need pensions not exceeding 20s Provision is also made for other dependants

A totally disabled man who is certified to require constant attendance may receive an additional allowance not exceeding 20s a week

Treatment

Where a special course of treatment is necessary for a condition of disablement certified to be due to war service the Ministry of Pensions have power to provide it, and if in consequence of and during a course of treatment a man is unable to provide for his own support and that of his family, treatment allowances may be granted in lieu of pension and allowances

By March 31 1933 the Ministry of Pensions will have spent on medical treatment and its accessories about £61 330 000 and another £36 520 000 in special allowances to the patients and their families during the treatment in addition to their ordinary pensions

Industrial and Provident Societies.

It is not generally known that associations for carrying on any industry business or trade may be registered under the Industrial and Provident Societies Acts and when so registered enjoy among other advantages the privileges of limited liability In his report the Registrar of Friendly Societies who administers these Acts says —

'A society, established to carry on any industry business or trade may be registered under the Industrial and Provident Societies Acts and obtain the privileges of incorporation with limited liability, provided that it restricts the holding which any member may have or claim in its shares to £200, and if it carries on the business of banking that its share capital is not withdrawable

At the end of 1930, 5,821 societies were registered they had a total membership of 7 511 408 and their balance sheets showed total assets (omitting inter society investments) valued at £236 764 000 The societies registered at the end of 1930 were classified by the Registrar as follows —

Fisheries.

The quantities and values of the sea fish of British taking landed in Great Britain and Ireland in 1931 (exclusive of river salmon) are shown in the following table. The total catch was 103,000 tons less than in 1930 (the largest since the outbreak of the War) and 202,000 tons less than the record catch of 1913. Representing the 1913 catch by 100, the catches during 1926-31 were respectively 81, 86, 85, 89, 92 and 83. The total value in 1931 was £2,503,000 less than in the previous year.

Home Consumption of Coal.

In a normal year about 200,000,000 tons of coal are available for home consumption. Railway locomotives require about 13,000,000 tons; gas works 17,000,000 tons; coke production 17,000,000 tons, of which about half (with 1,500,000 tons of coal) is consumed by blast furnaces; colliery engines require about 14,000,000 tons, and coal miners receive about 6,000,000 tons; electrical generating stations require about 10,000,000 tons, and coasting ships require over 1,300,000 tons; in addition, about 40,000,000 tons are used for domestic heating and cooking, and over 70,000,000 tons for manufactures. In the six months (Jan.-June), 1931, steamers and motor vessels used 7,055,000 tons of coal and 200,752,000 gallons of oil fuel.

EXTERNAL TRADE (GREAT BRITAIN AND NORTHERN IRELAND).

IN statistics of Trade, the term GENERAL TRADE refers to the whole volume of Imports (including such as are temporarily detained and afterwards exported), and to the whole volume of Exports. The term SPECIAL TRADE includes only Imports for consumption in the country receiving them and Exports of home produce or manufacture. Imports are taken at their C I F value (which includes the Cost of the merchandise and the charges for Insurance and Freight) whereas Exports are taken at their F O B (free on board) value which includes only the Cost of the merchandise delivered to the exporting ship. Exports have an added value by the time they reach their destination, having become loaded en route with Insurance and Freight. They leave the country of origin with an F O B value and arrive with an acquired C I F value.

Postal Traffic.

Average Daily Receipts, 1929-1932.

The following table (Board of Trade Journal) gives the average receipts of the Post Office in Great Britain from postal traffic, per working day, for each month from January, 1929. Telegraph and Telephone receipts, Savings Bank, and Money and Postal Order business are excluded. The value of postage stamps used for receipt stamp and other revenue duties is included. The figures are an approximately correct index of the movement from month to month of the amount of postal traffic handled, expressed in terms of postage, and may be regarded as a reflection of the state of the country's trade.

ROADS AND ROAD VEHICLES.

The total mileage of public roads in Great Britain is approximately 177,000 miles, of which 152 000 are in England and Wales and 25 000 in Scotland The cost of maintenance improvement (widening etc), and new construction in 1914 15 was £18,800 000, and in 1929 30 £65 469 691 The roads of Great Britain have been classified by the Ministry of Transport and out of the total mileage of 177 000 26 500 (approximately) have been included in Class I, and 26 500 (approximately) miles in Class II

The maintenance and improvement &c of public roads is within the jurisdiction of the "highway authorities Under the Local Government Act, 1929, county councils in England and Wales as from the appointed day (April 1, 1930), became the highway authorities for all roads in rural districts and all classified roads (i e Class I and Class II Roads) outside the county and metropolitan boroughs, together with the main roads, for which the county councils were already the highway authorities prior to the appointed day These roads are known as "county roads and are now a county charge, although district councils in many cases continue to carry out the actual work of maintenance and improvement The borough and urban councils are the highway authorities for roads other than county roads which lie within their areas In Scotland under the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1929, the county councils are the highway authorities in respect of all roads outside the burghs, and in respect of all classified roads in burghs with a population of less than 20,000 except the burgh of Arbroath All burghs remain highway authorities in respect of their unclassified roads The Act provides that the functions of the County Council in regard to highways may be partially exercised by Committees or by the Town Councils of small burghs in accordance with an administrative scheme submitted by the County Council to and approved by the Secretary of State for Scotland The motor licence duties (referred to below) are paid into a Road Fund which is administered by the Minister of Transport Grants are made from the Road Fund to highway authorities towards the cost of maintenance, improvement and construction of roads and bridges During the year 1931 32 the grants from the Road Fund amounted to £20,339,371 The bulk of this money was directed to assisting highway authorities in the maintenance and improvement of classified roads and bridges, and the construction of new roads and bridges of classification value Under the Local Government Act 1929, the grants hitherto made out of the Road Fund towards the maintenance of classified roads in London and the county boroughs and of unclassified roads in counties have been discontinued as from April 1, 1930, and a sum corresponding to these amounts, together with an additional contribution, is paid out of the Road Fund towards the block grants to local authorities for which the Act provides

The total gross receipts from the taxation of road vehicles between December 1, 1930, and November 30, 1931, amounted to £27,378,028 The approximate number of motor vehicles licensed during this period was 2,196,100, while licences in respect of private and hackney horse drawn carriages numbered 41,907 The average receipt in respect of a whole year licence was £13 17*s* 6*d* for cars taxed on horse power, £2 15*s* 0*d* for motor bicycles, £25 13*s* 0*d* for internal combustion and steam driven goods vehicles, £20 0*s* 6*d* for electric goods vehicles and £48 10*s* 0*d* for motor hackneys

BRITISH RAILWAYS

The length of road (first track) of the railways owned, leased or worked by the Companies formed under Part I of the Railways Act, 1921, at Dec 31 1931, was as under —

Southern	miles 2 194
Great Western	,, 3 804
London, Midland & Scottish	,, 6,956
London & North Eastern	,, 6 382
Total	19,336

Railways in 1931

Capital authorised	£1 311 617 653
,, created	1,235,355 474
issued	1 209,053,431

The amount appropriated for the payment of interest and dividend on capital in 1931 was £38 350 533 representing 3 23 per cent upon the total capital On Ordinary Stock issued the average return was 1 21 per cent

The number of traffic locomotives were steam 22,325, electric 40 and petrol 8 Passenger carriages numbered 49 784 merchandise and mineral vehicles 682,759 and containers 6,290 The gross receipts from railway working amounted to £170 158,536 compared with £184,836,382 in 1930, a decrease of £14,677,846 On the other hand expenditure on railway working declined from £147 595 684 in 1930 to £136 858,604 in 1931 Ordinary and workmens journeys in 1931 numbered 1 156 353 189, a decrease of 5 per cent compared with 1930 while passenger receipts including season tickets, were reduced by £4 867,050 or 7 39 per cent the higher ratio of decrease being attributable to the extended use of cheap fares For the four group companies the receipts from passengers in 1931 were £52 385 031, a decrease of £4 614 763 every item showing a decrease except third class season tickets on the Southern Railway On all railways the tonnage of goods and minerals in 1931 was 268,380,148 tons, compared with 304,361 107 tons in 1930 the receipts being £83,856 230, a decrease of £8 746 493 The decision of the Southern Railway to provide third class passengers on the electrified London Brighton line with accommodation of a standard hitherto regarded as first class is a reaction to the growing importance of third class traffic In 1931 third class passengers on all the railways made 1,239,600,000 journeys while first class journeys numbered only 59 400 000 First class passengers added to the railways revenue only £6,000,000 as compared with the third-class passengers contribution of £50,000,000

LONDONERS MODE OF TRAVEL

Recorded figures show that in 1931 each Londoner, statistically speaking, made 496 journeys These were apportioned as follows —

	No of journeys
Omnibuses	236
Trams	130
Underground	78
Suburban trains	50
Coaches	2
Total	496

Londoners prefer buses to all other means of transport There are ten buses in London to every one that New York possesses The following figures for 1931 show that the New York Subway and the Paris Metro are patronised by a far larger proportion of the population than is London s Underground —

	All Passengers	Underground Passengers
London	4 066 112,000	641 917,202
New York	3,553 934,000	2,105 000,000
Paris	1,958,218,000	929,000,000

CANALS

There are 3,825 miles of canals and canalised rivers in Great Britain (England and Wales 3 641 miles Scotland 184 miles), no additions to the mileage having been made for several years In 1930 the inland waterways carried tonnage (so far as returns are available) as under :—

	Mileage of Canals	Tonnage carried
Independent	1 234	11,419,861
Railway owned	1,048	1 693,905
Thames	126	22,897
Caledonian and Crinan	70	99,121
Total	2,478	13,235,784

A Royal Commission on Transport reported in 1930 that, in spite of their limitations, canals and inland navigations form a useful component of the national scheme of transport and that properly rationalised and developed they can be made to render much useful service to the community in the future The Manchester Ship Canal, opened in 1894 has a total length of 36 miles, and connects Manchester with the Mersey port of Liverpool, In 1929 the tonnage carried through the canal was 6,588,559 tons, and in 1930 the tonnage of toll paying traffic was 6,290,625 tons, and the tolls, dues &c, £1,395,567

4 The fastest actual start to stop running in England over a great distance

B Start to pass average This train passes Jeumont the first station before crossing the Franco Belgian frontier 147 7 miles from Paris in 134 minutes at an average of 66 1 miles per hour the highest schedule speed in Europe over a great distance The run marked † however is of a lower speed but the distance is greater

The highest authentic speed ever recorded was in a journey from Plymouth to Paddington on May 9 1904—102 3 miles per hour

In June 1840 the first trial by a new engine with only two pairs attached made by Messrs Laird Kitson & Co on the North Midland Railway ran between Belper and Clay Cross Tunnel a distance of 10 miles in eight minutes being at the rate of 75 miles per hour

TRAMWAYS.

The total mileage of tramways and light railways open in Great Britain on Dec. 31, 1930, was 2,323. The total receipts in 1930–31 were £25,281,531, the working expenses £20,467,129, and the net receipts £4,814,402, the total paid up capital being £99,276,410. 4,394,530,590 passengers were carried.

Under the London Passenger Transport Bill promoted in 1931 by the Minister of Transport (Rt. Hon. Herbert Morrison) it was proposed to transfer the tramway systems in the London metropolitan area to a London Passenger Transport Board which would have been given control of all passenger transport undertakings and interests in the London Traffic Area. The Bill was held over at the Dissolution of Parliament.

POSTS, TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES.

The carriage and custody of the mails has been maintained by the State "from time immemorial." The telegraphs were transferred to the State on Jan. 28, 1870; the telephone service became exclusively owned and operated by the Government (with one or two minor exceptions) on the transfer of the National Telephone Company's undertaking to the Post Office on Jan. 1, 1912. The submarine telegraph cables connecting the British Isles with the various Dominions and most Foreign Countries except the Continent of Europe are maintained and operated by private companies. The submarine telephone cables from the British Isles to the Continent are either owned entirely by the State or jointly with the Foreign Administration in whose territory the other end of the cable terminates.

Wireless Telegraphy.

Post Office as Licensing Authority —By the Wireless Telegraphy Acts, 1904–26, it was made illegal to install or work wireless telegraphy in the United Kingdom or on board British ships in territorial waters except with the Postmaster General's licence By the Wireless Telegraphy Order 1908, the provisions of the Wireless Telegraphy Act 1904 apply to British Ships whilst on the high seas The Merchant Shipping (Wireless Telegraphy) Act, 1919, made it compulsory for all British sea going ships over 1,600 tons to carry wireless apparatus The Post Office conducts the inspection of such apparatus under the Acts, and also the examination of Wireless Operators for the Postmaster General's Certificate

Ship and Shore Service —The ship and shore stations of the Marconi Company and Lloyds, 10 in number, were bought by the Postmaster General in 1909 The service has since been reorganised and now comprises 13 stations, viz —Cullercoats, Fishguard, Humber, Land's End, Malin Head, Niton, North Foreland, Portishead, Portpatrick Rugby, Seaforth, Valentia and Wick Portishead Radio affords (a) world wide communication with ships equipped with short wave sending and receiving apparatus, and (b) communication up to a range of about 2,000 miles with ships equipped with long continuous wave-sending and receiving apparatus. Rugby Radio can transmit radiotelegrams to ships equipped with long-wave receiving apparatus The range is world wide, but ships are not in a position to reply to this station A public telephone service between certain Transatlantic Liners and telephone subscribers in Great Britain and certain Continental countries is also afforded through Rugby Radio

Anglo Continental Wireless Services — Post Office wireless services have been instituted side by side with the cable services to the following Continental countries —Italy, Poland, Estonia, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, the Free State of Danzig, Rumania, Latvia, Finland and Russia The services with Italy, Hungary, Rumania, Estonia, and Danzig are carried on via the Leafield Station (near Oxford) The latter station is also used for the transmission of news and commercial intelligence intended for simultaneous reception in several European countries A medium power transmitter at the Rugby Station is also used for the services to Czechoslovakia and Poland

Super power Transmitter at the Rugby Station. —This transmitter uses power of 1,000 kilowatts and is capable of communication with any part of the globe It is used for the broadcasting of British Official news messages Meteorological Office reports and Greenwich Time Signals, and for transmitting radio telegrams and news messages to ships at sea

Beam and Omni Directional Wireless Stations. —The privately owned wireless stations in this country at present carrying on commercial services with other countries are owned and operated by Imperial and International Communications Limited They consist of the Marconi Short Wave Wireless Beam stations at Bodmin, Bridgwater, Grimsby, Skegness, Dorchester and Somerton, the high powered omni-directional station at Carnarvon, and the medium power omni directional stations at Ongar and Brentwood in Essex the last two stations also employ Marconi short wave Beam apparatus The Bodmin and Bridgwater and the Grimsby and Skegness Beam stations consist of two groups of two units each, one unit of each group being a transmitting station and the other unit a receiving station The Bodmin transmitting station and Bridgwater receiving station carry out direct high speed wireless communication with Canada and South Africa The Grimsby transmitting station and Skegness receiving station carry out similar communication with Australia and India The Dorchester Beam transmitting station consists of eight Marconi short wave Beam transmitters, and is the largest beam wireless station in the world The Somerton station is the receiving station of this short-wave Beam group, and has fourteen receivers employed on the same services

All these wireless stations are operated and controlled directly from Electra House, London, the central radio office of Imperial and International Communications Limited

* Radiotelegrams.

The Address of a radiotelegram should contain name of addressee of ship and of coast station to be used Private messages for H M Navy may not be sent through Portishead or Rugby radio and must have in the address

'Radiotelegram' as used in the official Postal Guide denotes only a message to or from a ship at sea, and includes no other kind of radiotelegraphic message.

TELEPHONES

CONDITIONS OF SUPPLY.

Telephone instruments are supplied and connexion is established with the appropriate exchange by the Postmaster General at various rates, with an extra charge if the premises to be connected are more than 2 miles from the exchange Extensions are also provided as required The rate for calls varies with the distance, and can be ascertained from the introductory pages of the Telephone Directory

TELEPHONES ABROAD

The caller should ask for "Trunks,' and give the name of country and town required The minimum charge always covers a period of 3 minutes, each further minute or part thereof costing one third of this minimum In periods of pressure calls may be limited to 12 minutes Most countries are divided into zones (Z_1, Z_2, etc) and charges are based on the distance between fixed points in the connected zones Zone boundaries are fixed in different ways and are often very irregular In the following lists they can only be indicated very roughly, by certain towns* or areas named in brackets

A CONTINENTAL TELEPHONES — The British zones are —First Zone London and S E England including the counties Somerset, Glos, Worcs, Warwick, Leics, Notts, Lincs Second Zone —England N or W of those counties, and Wales Third Zone —Isle of Man, Scotland, Northern Ireland "Day charges are reduced at "night' (i e 7 p m to 8 a m) Single "night calls of at least one hour are charged at half the 'day' rates "Personal calls' are admitted, if the person asked for is available, a "personal charge (one third of the normal minimum) is added to the call cost, if he is not available, only the personal charge is made

The following list gives the minimum cost of a "day' and "night' call respectively from the First British Zone The minimum cost from other British zones is greater by amounts varying irregularly but within a narrow range—for the Second Zone "day, 1/9 to 2/, "night' 1/– to 1/3, for the Third Zone. THE KINGDOM OF ENGLAND.

Position and Extent —The Kingdom of England occupies the southern portion of the island of Great Britain and lies between 55° 46 and 49° 57 30 N latitude (from the mouth of the Tweed to the Lizard) and between 1° 46 E and 5° 43 W (from Lowestoft to Land's End) England is bounded on the north by the summit of the Cheviot Hills which form a natural boundary with the Kingdom of Scotland on the south by the English Channel on the east by the Straits of Dover (Pas de Calais) and the North Sea and on the west by the Atlantic Ocean (which washes the Cornish coast), Wales and the Irish Sea Total area 50 851 square miles Population (1931) 37 354 917

Relief —There is a natural orographic division into the hilly districts of the north west and south west and the undulating downs and low lying plains of the east and south east In the extreme north the Cheviot Hills run from east to west, culminating in the Cheviot 2 676 feet above mean sea level Divided from the Cheviots by the Tyne Gap is the Pennine Chain running N by W to S by E with their highest point in Cross Fell, 2 930 feet above mean sea level West of the Pennines are the Cumbrian Mountains, which contain in Scafell Pike (3 210 feet) the highest land in England and east of the Pennines are the Yorkshire Moors their highest point being Urra Moor (1 489 feet) South of the Pennines are the Peak of Derbyshire (2 088 feet) and Dartmoor (High Willhays 2 039 feet) In the western county of Shropshire are the isolated Wrekin (1 335 feet) Long Mynd (1 674 feet) and Brown Clee (1 805 feet) in Herefordshire the Black Mountain (2 310 feet) in Worcestershire the Malvern Hills (1,395 feet) in Monmouthshire the Sugar Loaf (1,955 feet) and Coity (1 905 feet) and the Cotswold Hills of Gloucestershire contain Cleeve Cloud (1 134 feet)

Hydrography —The Thames is the longest and most important river of England with a total length of 210 miles from its source in the Cotswold Hills to its outflow into the North Sea, and is navigable by ocean going steamers to London Bridge The Thames is tidal to Teddington (60 miles from its mouth) the Wilts and Berks canal enters at Abingdon and the Kennet and Avon canal at Reading The principal tributaries are the Cherwell Lee Kennet, Wey, Mole and Medway The Thames forms county boundaries almost throughout its course, and on its banks are situated the capital of the British Empire, Windsor Castle the home of the Sovereign Eton College, the first of the public schools, and Oxford, the oldest university in the kingdom The Severn is the longest river in Great Britain, rising in the north eastern slopes of Plinlimmon (Wales) and entering England in Shropshire with a total length of 220 miles from its source to its outflow into the Bristol Channel, where it receives on the left the Bristol Avon, and on the right the Wye, its other tributaries being the Vyrnwy, Tern, Stour, Teme and Upper (or Warwickshire) Avon The Severn is tidal below Gloucester and a high bore or tidal wave sometimes reverses the flow as high as Tewkesbury (13½ miles above Gloucester) The scenery of the greater part of the river is very picturesque and beautiful and the Severn is a noted salmon river, some of its tributaries being famous for trout. Navigation is assisted by the Gloucester and Berkeley Ship Canal (16¾ miles), which admits vessels of 350 tons to Gloucester, other canals connecting with the Thames, Trent, Dee and Mersey The Severn Tunnel, which carries the Great Western Railway under the river, 14 miles below the Shirepness Bridge, was begun in 1873 and completed in 1886 (at a cost of £2,000 000) after many difficulties from flooding, &c The tunnel is 4 miles 624 yards in length (of which 2¼ miles are under the river) Of the remaining English rivers those flowing into the North Sea are the Tyne, Wear, Tees, Ouse and Trent from the Pennine Range, the Great Ouse (160 miles) from the Central Plain and the Orwell and Stour from the hills of East Anglia Flowing into the English Channel are the Sussex Ouse from the Weald the Itchen from the Wiltshire and Hampshire Hills and the Axe, Teign Dart Tamar and Exe from the Devonian Hills and flowing into the Irish Sea are the Mersey Ribble and Eden from the western slopes of the Pennines and the Derwent from the Cumbrian Mountains The English Lakes are noteworthy rather from their picturesque scenery and poetic associations than from their size These lie mainly in Cumberland, but partly in Westmorland and Lancashire the largest being Windermere (10 miles long), Ullswater and Derwent water

Islands —The Scilly Islands (Cornwall), 25 miles from Land's End consist of about 40 islands with a total area of about 4 000 acres, only St Mary's, Tresco St Martin's St Agnes and Bryher being inhabited, population (1931) 1 732 The capital is Hugh Town in St Mary's The climate is unusually mild, and vegetation luxuriant semi tropical plants flourishing in the open The Isle of Wight is separated from Hampshire by the Solent The total area is 147 sq miles population (1931) 88,400 The climate is mild and healthy and many watering places have grown up during the last century Capital Newport at the head of the estuary of the Medina, Cowes (at the mouth) being the chief port other centres are Ryde Sandown Shanklin Ventnor, Freshwater Yarmouth, Totland Bay Seaview and Bembridge Lundy Island, 11 miles N W of Hartland Point, Devon is about 2½ miles long and 1 mile broad with a total area of about 1 050 acres (mainly picturesque) and a population of about 50 It contains the seat of the proprietor of the island and two lighthouses

Climate —The south westerly winds from the Atlantic Ocean penetrate to the heart of the country affecting the temperature of the greater part of the kingdom, and only the coastal regions of the east have a modified continental climate The mean annual temperature is about 50° Fahrenheit varying from 52° in the Scilly Islands to 48° at the mouth of the Tweed and generally the west of England is mild and wet in winter and cool and less wet in summer while the east is cool and dry in winter and spring and hot and less dry in summer and autumn, the wettest region being the Lake district of Cumberland and the driest in the Thames estuary and the Lincolnshire Wash The climate of England is influenced by the much indented coastline of the west and by the flow of warm water in the Gulf Stream Drift, which strikes the S W projection and proceeds N and E along the west and south coasts

EARLY INHABITANTS

Prehistoric Man.—A skeleton found at Galley Hill near Northfleet Kent (in 1895) has been ascribed to a man of Central Asian race of the Early Stone Age and stone implements of the remote Eolithic Palæolithic and Neolithic periods are abundantly found throughout England. The Neolithic period is held to have merged into the Bronze Age about 2000 to 1500 B.C. and a date between these years has been given to Stonehenge (presented by Sir C. H. F. Chubb to the Nation in 1908 and now preserved as a national monument). Stonehenge (10 miles N. of Salisbury Wiltshire) consists of two circles of menhirs (the largest monolith being 22½ feet in height) only 16 remaining in position in the outer circle while two of the five triple sets are still in position in the inner circle. The use for which the temple or monument was erected is the subject of many conjectures.

The Celtic Invasion.—In the latter part of the Bronze Age the Goidels a people of Celtic race and in the Iron Age another Celtic race of Brythons invaded the country and brought with them Celtic civilization and dialects place names in England bearing witness to the spread of the invasion over the whole kingdom.

The Roman Conquest.—Julius Cæsar raided Britain in 55 B.C. and 54 B.C. and in 43 A.D. the conquest of the country was undertaken by the Roman Emperor Claudius who sent Aulus Plautius with a well equipped army of 40 000 men and himself visited Colchester (Camulodunum) and Londinium. The British leader from 48–51 A.D. was Caractacus (strictly Cunatcus) who was finally captured and sent to Rome. By 70 A.D. the conquest of South Britain was completed a great revolt under Boadicea (strictly Boudicca) Queen of the Iceni (Norfolk) being crushed in 61 A.D. In 122 A.D. the Emperor Hadrian visited Britain and built a continuous rampart known as Hadrian's Wall, from Wallsend to Bowness (Tyne to Solway) remains of which are still traceable. The Romans administered Britain as a Province under a Governor with a well defined system of local government each Roman municipality ruling itself and the surrounding territory. Colchester Lincoln York Gloucester and St. Albans stand on the sites of five Roman municipalities while London was the centre of the road system and the seat of the financial officials of the Province of Britain. A well preserved Roman town of about 100 acres was first uncovered in the 18th century at Silchester (Calleva Atrebatum), 10 miles south of Reading, and since 1890 the whole site has been investigated. Four main groups of roads radiated from London and a fifth (the Fosse) ran obliquely from Lincoln Street (at Lincoln) through Leicester Cirencester and Bath to Exeter. Of the four groups radiating from London one ran S.E. to Canterbury and the coast of Kent a second to Silchester and thence to parts of Western Britain and South Wales, a third (now known as Watling Street) ran through Verulamium (St. Albans) to Chester with various branches and the fourth reached Colchester, Lincoln York and the eastern counties. Christianity reached the Roman Province of Britain from Gaul in the 3rd century (or possibly earlier), the Bishops of Londinium, Eboracum (York), and Lindum (Lincoln) attending the Council of Arles in 314. The Roman garrison of Britain was much harassed in the 4th century by Saxon pirates, who invaded the eastern counties from the Wash to Spithead while about 350 A.D. incursions in the north of Irish (Scoti) and Picts became most formidable and towards the end of the century many troops were removed from Britain for service in other parts of the Roman Empire. Early in the 5th century Gaul was taken from the Romans by Teutonic invaders and Britain was cut off from Rome officials were no longer sent to the island the garrison was left to defend itself and appears to have been driven inland by the Northern and Saxon invaders and to have been conquered and absorbed by the Celtic inhabitants whose language and customs re-emerged.

Anglo Saxons and Normans.—The Celtic Britons appear to have called in the Saxons to resist the raids of the Picts and Scots and eventually the English (Angles Saxons and Jutes) drove the Britons into the mountain fastnesses of the West (Strathclyde Wales and Cornwall) the name of Welch (old English Waelisc = Foreign) being given to the islanders by the invaders from the continent. The area thus conquered was divided into several kingdoms of which the chief were Northumbria (Bernicia and Deira) Mercia (Middle Angles) and Wessex. The heathen Anglo (whose gods Tiu, Woden Thunor and Frig are commemorated in Tuesday Wednesday Thursday and Friday) were converted to Christianity by a mission under Augustine (dispatched by Pope Gregory in 597) which established Archbishoprics at Canterbury and York and the whole of England appears to have been converted by the end of the 7th century. In the 8th century Offa King of Mercia is stated to have built a wall and rampart afterwards known as Offa's Dike from the mouth of the Dee to that of the Wye as a protection against the Welsh. The greatest of the English kingdoms was Wessex, with its capital at Winchester and the greatest of the Wessex kings was Alfred the Great (871–901) who resisted the incursions of the Northmen (Danes) and fixed a limit to their advance by the Treaty of Wedmore (878). In the 10th century the Kings of Wessex recovered the whole of England from the Danes. But subsequent rulers were unable to resist the invaders and England paid tribute (Danegelt) for many years, and was ruled by Danish Kings from 1016 to 1042, when Edward the Confessor was recalled from exile. In 1066 Harold (brother in law of Edward and son of Earl Godwin of Wessex) was chosen King of England but after defeating a Northumbrian revolt under his brother Tostig (aided by an invading army of Harold Hardrada of Norway) at Stamford Bridge in Yorkshire (Sept. 25), he was himself defeated at the battle of Hastings (or Sautlache) on Oct. 14 1066 and the Norman Conquest secured the throne of England for Duke William of Normandy. Since the Norman Conquest all attempts to invade England have been defeated.

ENGLISH COUNTIES

For Administrative purposes England is divided into 49 Administrative Counties (under the Local Government Act of 1888). The boundaries of these Administrative Counties differ in many cases from those of the older Geographical Counties, while the areas of the 72 County Boroughs created under the Act of 1888 are excluded from the County Areas, and the population of the Boroughs is separately enumerated. The area, population and chief officers of the Administrative Counties are shown in the following pages.

THE CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

LONDON was famed for its vast conflux of traders and its abundant commerce even in the first century of the Christian era. From the Romans it is said it received municipal institutions which have endured in their main features to the present day. In Saxon times it was in reality a small independent State and its burgesses maintained their independence even after the Battle of Hastings. William the Norman only gained possession of their city by means of a treaty with them and about eight years after he granted a charter which is still preserved. It is addressed to William the Bishop, Godfrey the Portreeve and all the Burgesses and promises that they shall be 'law worthy (i.e. possessed of privileges) as they were in the days of Edward the Confessor'. The Portreeve, however, received the Norman title of Bailiff which in 1191 was changed to Mayor, the first holder under the new name being Henry Fitzalwyn, who filled the office for 24 years. On his death a new charter was granted by King John in 1214 which directed the Mayor to be chosen annually which has ever since been done, though in early times the same individual often held the office more than once. A familiar instance is that of Whittington three times Lord Mayor of London (in reality four times A.D. 1397, 1398, 1406, 1419) and many modern cases have occurred. The title of Lord Mayor was not in general use in the outer world until about 1545. The Lord Mayor is elected at Michaelmas, he is sworn into office on November 8 and on the following day presented to the Lord Chief Justice at the Royal Courts of Justice to take the final declaration of office—the pageant being popularly known as the Lord Mayor's Show.

Aldermen were first appointed by a charter of Henry III in 1242 and were elected annually between 1377 and 1394 when a charter of Richard II directed them to be chosen for life. The Common Council elected annually on St. Thomas's Day (Dec. 21) was at an early date substituted for a popular assembly called the Folkmote. At first only two representatives were sent from each ward but the number has since been greatly increased, some wards having as many as 16 members and none less than four. Sheriffs (as well as aldermen) were Saxon officers who usually had charge of a large district. The time of their appointment for London is uncertain, but they appear in ancient records as early as A.D. 1130. At first they were only the officers of the Crown and were named by the Barons of the Exchequer, but King John gave them, in the first year of his reign, permission to choose their own Sheriffs. The citizens however lost this privilege as far as the election of Sheriff of Middlesex is concerned by the Local Government Act, 1888, but they continue as heretofore to choose the Sheriffs of the City of London. They are appointed on Midsummer Day and enter on office at Michaelmas.

Officers.—The Recorder was first appointed in 1298. The Chamberlain is an ancient officer. There were at one time two Chamberlains—the King's Chamberlain and the Chamberlain of the Guildhall. The former appears to have fallen into abeyance circ. 1319. The first contemporary record of the office of City Chamberlain is 1276. The Town Clerk and Common Serjeant are mentioned as officers in the charter of Edward II. A.D. 1319, but the offices can be traced to a much earlier date than this.

The Right Honourable the Lord Mayor 1932–1933

Sir Percy Walter Greenaway, Kt., born 1874. Common Councilman 1917. Alderman of Bishopsgate Ward 1924. Sheriff 1931. Lord Mayor, 1932. The Mansion House, E.C. 4. £10,000.
Private Secretary, I. Harvey Hull.

* The above is abstracted from the 299th City's Cash Account of the Estates extant—A.D. 1633 to 1931-32. The Accounts earlier than A.D. 1633 were believed to have been destroyed in the Fire of London, but two years Accounts temp. Queen Elizabeth have been discovered among the Corporation Archives, as exceptions to that belief. The Volumes are in full detail signed by the Auditors and in perfect preservation. The above extract is from the 148th Annual Printed Account of the Corporation A.D. 1784 to 1931-32. The Accounts are prepared and stated as directed by Resolutions of the Court of Common Council of the 5th June 1903, the 14th December 1905 and 25th January 1917 upon Reports of the Coal and Corn and Finance Committee and they are printed in uniformity with the 87th Standing Order of the Court of Common Council. The Accounts are made up to the end of March and are issued in the form prescribed by those Orders and show the Income and Expenditure applicable to the year on the various Funds.

THE CITY GUILDS (LIVERY COMPANIES).

IN the majority of cases the designation of the Company gives a clue to the trade which gave rise to the guild the Broderers (Embroiderers) Cordwainers (cobblers) Fletchers (arrow makers) Lorimers (bridle bit and spur makers) Poulters (poulterers) Scriveners (legal writers) Upholders (upholsterers), and Vintners (wine sellers) retaining the ancient name of the trade The order of precedence is given in parentheses after the name of each Company

9 716 Liverymen of the Guilds are entitled to vote at elections in Common Hall (see p 684) The actual net number is however smaller as many belong to more than one Guild and only those who have residential or other qualification in the City have the Parliamentary vote in that district

There are 78 Guilds in existence The Liveries of the Lorimers (382) Stationers (376) and Merchant Taylors (329) are the most numerous, the Upholders (18) the smallest

THE LONDON FIRE BRIGADE Headquarters 94 Southwark Bridge Road S E 1

PREVIOUS to the formation of the Metropolitan Fire Brigade in 1866 the churchwardens and overseers of every parish had been compelled, under an Act passed in 1774 to maintain an engine for putting out all fires occurring within their own boundaries and from about 1830 the leading fire insurance companies had jointly organised and worked a fire engine establishment of their own. On January 1 1866 under the Metropolitan Fire Brigade Act 1865 the Metropolitan Board of Works took over these responsibilities. On January 1 1867 the Board also took over from the Royal Society for the Protection of Life from Fire (founded 1844) the service of the saving of life from fire. By the passing of the Local Government Act 1888 the London County Council assumed control of the Fire Brigade. In 1904 the title of the Brigade was altered from Metropolitan Fire Brigade to "London Fire Brigade."

On Dec 31 1932, the complement of the Brigade consisted of —1 chief officer 2 divisional officers, 3 assistant divisional officers, and 1 935 officers, firemen, and pilots a technical and clerical staff of 193. There were 61 land fire stations 3 river stations and 1 river repairing depot. The appliances included 87 motor fire engines 74 motor escape vans 6 petrol electric motor ladders 5 petrol motor ladders (in addition to tenders &c.) 3 hose carts and 104 fire escapes 1 long fire ladder 64 miles of hose 1 steam and 3 motor fire floats, 55 smoke helmets 399 hook ladders and 203 hook belts. There were 1 691 street fire alarm posts 97 telephone lines from station to station and 357 telephone lines to public and other buildings. The number of calls to which the Brigade responded during the year ended Dec 31 1931, totalled 8 080 and the fires numbered 4 465 of which 24 were classed as serious.

THE London County Council was constituted under the Local Government Act of 1888 London is an administrative county, covering an area of 117 square miles

The City of London is an electoral division of the county The County of the City of London is a county for non administrative purposes, such as quarter sessions justices &c , and the Metropolis outside the City is a county for non administrative purposes, by name the County of London, in which the justices continue their judicial duties

The Council comprises a chairman, 20 aldermen, and 124 councillors together 145 or if the chairman be also an elected member or alderman 144 The term of office for aldermen is 6 years and ten retire every 3 years The councillors are elected for 3 years The councillors are elected directly by the ratepayers, and the councillors elect the aldermen The positions of aldermen and councillors are the same, except as to the term of office

The method by which the Council discharges the multitudinous duties entrusted to it is a generous delegation of powers to committees under well defined rules subject to the reservation to the Council itself of all questions of principle, and to periodical reports of action taken In addition to members of the Council co opted members are included on the following committees Central Public Health Education Housing Mental Hospitals, Midwives Acts and Public Assistance

Under the Local Government Act 1929, the Council, as from April 1, 1930, became responsible for the administration of all forms of poor relief in London including the services previously maintained by the late Metropolitan Asylums Board As required by the Act the Council prepared an administrative scheme for discharging the functions transferred and the transferred services were merged as far as possible in the Council's existing organisation and allocated to the committees of the Council to which they were appropriate

The Finance Committee have important statutory powers No costs debt or liability exceeding £50 may be incurred by the Council except upon a resolution passed on an estimate submitted by the Finance Committee The Council is the principal money raising body for all the local authorities in the county, and has a net debt, according to the latest returns, of £83 222 000 (of which £45 959,000 represents debt incurred for revenue producing undertakings) and an annual expenditure of about forty millions

The Central Public Health Committee, among other duties affecting public health, are responsible for the treatment of tuberculosis, the diagnosis and treatment of venereal disease, the maintenance of 74 hospitals, with accommodation for over 41 000 patients, and the Council's ambulance service

The Education Committee comprise thirty eight members of the Council and twelve co opted members, of whom not less than five are required to be women The Education service involves an annual expenditure of nearly £13,000,000 The Council maintains 1,191 elementary schools with over 609,000 pupils, and 258 secondary and technical schools, evening institutes and training colleges with about 200 000 students In addition it gives grants in aid to the University of London and to 81 secondary and technical schools and training colleges

The Housing Committee perform the duties cast upon the Council by the various Housing Acts including the clearance of insanitary areas and the building of working class dwellings The total capital expenditure incurred up to March 31 1932, in respect of all schemes was £39 780 000 and very large works are still in progress Over 50 000 houses and tenements have been completed since the war

The Improvements Committee deal with questions relating to the carrying out of street improvements and construction of bridges, tunnels and ferries Among other works now being carried out is the widening of Putney bridge

The Mental Hospitals Committee administer the duties falling on the Council under the Lunacy Acts and the Mental Deficiency Act, 1913 and also the mental hospitals transferred from the Metropolitan Asylums Board The Council has mental hospitals and other institutions for the care of mental defectives, with accommodation for over 32 000 patients

The Metropolitan Main Drainage system covers about 159 square miles including certain districts outside the county and comprises about 400 miles of main storm relief, intercepting and outfall sewers twelve pumping stations, two sewage precipitation stations and five sludge vessels The total capital outlay on main dramage is over £16 000 000 and further expenditure is in progress for a scheme to relieve certain districts from flooding after heavy falls of rain, and for the installation of plant at the northern outfall for the treatment of sewage by the activated sludge process

The Public Assistance Committee administer the duties in connection with poor relief, other than hospital treatment, including the maintenance of institutions, receiving homes and training centres for over 11 000 inmates

The Council is the Tramway Authority for London The system (including about 9 miles belonging to the Leyton Urban District Council but worked by the London County Council) extends over 166¼ street miles all of which are electric lines (123¼ miles on the underground conduit system and 43¼ miles on the overhead system) The whole of this great system is worked by the Council, and through running with various systems outside the County of London is now maintained, to the great advantage and convenience of the travelling public The total capital outlay on tramways amounted, on March 31, 1932 to £18 915 000, and the net debt outstanding to £8 386 000 The results of working for the year 1931 32 were gross receipts £4,211,603, surplus on working £647,799, deficiency for year, after payment of interest on capital outlay and providing for repayment of debt £109,135, which was met to the extent of £31,637 by the surplus brought forward from the previous year, the balance (£77,498) being charged on the special county rate

Amongst the Other Powers and Duties of the Council may be mentioned the following —Sanctioning of loans required by the councils of the metropolitan boroughs maintenance of fire brigade acquisition and maintenance of parks and open spaces the sanctioning of local sewers town planning controlling the building line and the naming of streets and numbering of houses supervision of building and district surveyors dangerous structures cattle diseases control storage of explosive substances and petroleum infant life protection gas gas meter and electricity meter testing weights and measures licensing of slaughter houses and of cow houses supervision of common lodging houses the granting of licences for music dancing and boxing historic buildings and monuments inspection of factories and certain other buildings to secure means of escape from fire administration of the Shops Acts the Children Act and the Midwives Acts licensing and inspection of employment agencies registration of massage establishments licensing of premises under the Cinematograph Act registration of motor cars collection of duties on motor cars and establishment and certain other local taxation licences registration of War charities and welfare of blind persons

The Expenditure of the Council including loans to other local authorities is met by two chief sources of supply—capital money raised by the issue of Stock Bonds or bills or by the use of the Sinking Fund of the Council's debt and current income raised in a county rate or by the revenue of undertakings Certain contributions including education grants are also received from the Imperial Exchequer All borrowings by the Council are subject to the provision of a sinking fund under Treasury approval, sufficient to repay all expenditure generally within a period of 60 years (in a few cases the limit is 80 years) The total Stock outstanding at September 30 1932 was £98 135 599 These figures are exclusive of the issues of Bonds the amount outstanding at September 30 1932 being £6 067 760 Local Bonds for Housing

The Rating for the year 1932 33 as shown by the statement below (which relates to rate accounts only) amounted to 6s 3½d in the pound over the whole County including the City, and a further rate over the County outside the City of 3d in the pound together 6s 6½d The total rate for 1931 32 was 6 7½d The Assessable Value of the County of London on April 6 1932 was £59 662 000—a 1d rate over the whole county producing £248 592

FREEDOMS AND ADDRESSES (CITY OF LONDON)

THE Honorary Freedom of the City of London is conferred as a mark of high distinction upon eminent subjects of the Crown for exceptional services to the Country and the Empire The Freedom of the City of London is acquired after strict compliance with regulations from time to time issued pursuant to resolutions of the Court of Common Council The names of applicants who have complied with the regulations are submitted for election to the Court of Common Council at its fortnightly meetings those applying through the medium of a Livery Company being submitted in a similar manner to the Court of Aldermen Orphans of Freemen are eligible for election as foundation scholars at the Freemens School, Ashstead, Surrey and Freemen of the City of London are themselves eligible for admission to Almshouses at Brixton in accordance with regulations from time to time issued

Addresses of Welcome are occasionally offered to Foreign Sovereigns and Presidents pursuant to resolutions of the Court of Common Council These high distinctions are sometimes confused with the ceremony of admission to the Honorary Freedom of the City, but the Honorary Freedom is conferred only on persons in allegiance to H M the King

THE PRINCIPALITY OF WALES.

PHYSICAL GEOGRAPHY

Position and Extent —The Principality of Wales occupies the extreme west of the central southern portion of the island of Great Britain with a total area of 7 467 sq miles It is bounded on the N by the Irish Sea on the S by the Bristol Channel on the E by the English counties of Cheshire Salop, Hereford and Monmouth and on the W by St George s Channel The greatest length from N to S (Point of Air to Barry Island) is 136 miles and the greatest breadth from W to E (St David s Head to the English border) is 92 miles Separated from the mainland by the Menai Straits is the Welsh island county of Anglesey or Mon (276 sq miles) communication with which is facilitated by the Menai Suspension Bridge (1 000 ft long) built by Telford in 1826 and by the tubular railway bridge (1 100 ft long) of the L & N W Railway built by Stephenson in 1850 Holyhead harbour, on Holy Isle (N W of Anglesey), provides accommodation for a fast steam packet service to Kingstown and Dublin (70 miles)

Population —The population at the Census of 1931 was 2 593,014 (inclusive of Monmouthshire)

Relief —Wales is generally mountainous the chief systems being those of North Wales (Snowdon 3 571 ft Carnedd Llywelyn 3 484 ft Carnedd Dafydd 3 426 ft) Berwyn (Aran fawddy 2 970 ft) Powys (Plinlimmon 2 462 ft Dyfyn Fawr 2 115 ft, Radnor 2 163 ft) and the Black Mountain Brecknock Beacons and Black Forest ranges (Carmarthen Van 2 632 ft Brecon Beacon 2 862 ft, Pen y gaver fawr 2 660 ft)

Hydrography —The principal river of those rising in Wales is the Severn (see England) which flows from the slopes of Plinlimmon to the English border dividing Montgomeryshire on its way The Wye (130 miles) also rises in the slopes of Plinlimmon and flows between Radnor and Brecon on its course to England The Usk (56 miles) flows into the Bristol Channel through Monmouthshire The Dee (70 miles) rises in Bala lake and flows through the Vale of Llangollen where an aqueduct (built by Telford in 1805) carries the Pontcysyllte branch of the Shropshire Union Canal across the valley The estuary of the Dee is the navigable portion, 14 miles in length and about 5 miles in breadth and the tide rushes in with dangerous speed over the "Sands of Dee The Towy (68 miles) Teifi (50 miles) Taff (40 miles) Dovey (30 miles) Idf (25 miles), and Conway (24 miles) the last named broad and navigable are wholly Welsh rivers

The largest natural lake in Wales is Bala (Llyn Tegid) in Merionethshire 4 miles long and about 1 mile wide Lake Vyrnwy is an artificial reservoir about the size of Bala and forms the water supply of Liverpool, while Birmingham is supplied from a chain of reservoirs in the Elan and Claerwen valleys

EARLY HISTORY

Celts and Romans —The earliest inhabitants of whom there is any record appear to have been subdued or exterminated by the Goidels (a people of Celtic race) in the Bronze Age and a further invasion of Celtic Brythons followed in the ensuing Iron Age The Roman conquest of South Britain and Wales was for some time successfully opposed by Caradog (Caratacus), King of the Silures a tribe inhabiting the present counties of Glamorgan, Brecon Radnor and Monmouth In A D 78 the conquest of Wales was completed under Julius Frontinus and communications were opened up by the construction of military roads from Chester to Carleon on Usk and Caer Went and from Chester to Conway (and thence to Carmarthen and Neath) Christianity was introduced (during the Roman occupation) in the 4th century and the faith thus established was preserved (after the withdrawal of the Roman garrison) by native effort and was carried to the northernmost corners of the British Isles by missionaries to the Hebrides and to the Orkneys and Shetlands

The Anglo Saxon Attacks —The Anglo Saxon invaders of South Britain drove the Celtic Goidels and Brythons into the mountain fastnesses of Wales and into Strathclyde (Cumberland and S W Scotland) and Cornwall, giving them the name of Waelisc or Welsh (=Foreign) The West Saxons victory of Deorham (577) isolated the Waelisc of Wales from those of Cornwall while the battle of Chester (613) similarly cut off communication with the Waelisc of Strathclyde In the 8th century the boundaries of the Welsh were further restricted by the annexations of Offa King of Mercia, and counter attacks were largely prevented by the construction of an artificial boundary from the Dee to the Wye (Offa s Dike) In the 9th century Rhodri Mawr united the country against further incursions of the Saxons by land and against the raids of Norse and Danish pirates by sea but at his death his three provinces of Gwynedd (N) Powys (Mid) and Dehenbarth (S) were divided among his three sons—Anarawd, Merwyn and Cadell—the son of the last named being Howel Dda who codified the laws of the country while Llewelyn ap Seisyllt (husband of the heiress of Gwynedd) again united the provinces and reigned as Prince from 1015 1022

The Norman Conquest —After the Norman conquest of England William I created Palatine counties along the Welsh frontier and Robert FitzHamon, the Norman Earl of Gloucester, raided South Wales and erected fortresses from the Wye to Milford Haven Henry I introduced Flemish settlers into South Wales, but after his death the Welsh rose under the leadership of Griffith ap Rhys and routed the Norman Flemish forces at the fords of the Teifi (Cardigan) in 1136 From the early years of the 13th century the house Gwynedd in the north, gained an ascendency over the whole of Wales, and Llewelyn ap Iorwerth was in constant strife with England for recognition as an independent sovereign but Llewelyn the son of Iorwerth, was killed in 1282 during hostilities between the Welsh and English and his brother David was captured and executed by the English in 1283. On Feb 7, 1301, Edward of Carnarvon, son of Edward I, was created Prince of Wales, a title thenceforward borne by the heir apparent to the throne of England

The Welsh are a distinct nationality, with a language and literature of their own, and the national bardic festival (Eisteddfod), instituted by Prince Rhys ap Griffith in 1176, is annually maintained These Eisteddfodau (sessions) form part of the Gorsedd (assembly), which is believed to date from the time of Prydian, a ruling prince in an age many centuries before the Christian era

CARDIFF.

CARDIFF (Glamorgan), at the mouth of the rivers Taff (Caer Taff), Rummey and Ely, the port of the South Wales coal fields, has a municipal area of 13,628 acres, and a population (1931) of 223,648. The principal industries include ship repairing, rope making, steel, copper, lead and zinc works, iron and steel foundries, patent fuel works, engine wagon works, flour mills, chemical factories, paper mills, breweries, jam, vinegar and ice factories, tin plate and paint works. The chief imports are grain, timber, pitwood, ore, fruit, butter, cheese, frozen and chilled meat, live cattle, canned goods, sugar, potatoes. The exports include coal, coke, patent fuel, iron and steel manufactures, tin plates, &c.

The principal buildings are Cardiff Castle, built in the 11th century, the National Museum of Wales, Public Library, the University College of South Wales and Monmouthshire, the Registry of the University of Wales, Technical College, City Hall and Law Courts, and Glamorgan County Hall. The city returns 3 members to Parliament.

The Lord Mayor (1932–33), C. F. Sanders.
Stipendiary Magistrate, W. Hugh Jones, K.C.
Recorder, Roland E. L. Vaughan-Williams, K.C.
Town Clerk & Clk. of Peace, Cecil G. Brown, LL.B.

SWANSEA.

SWANSEA (Glamorgan), at the mouth of the River Tawe, is the chief centre of the copper, tinplate and spelter industry of the United Kingdom, and contains the largest tube works in the country. The trade of the port also includes coal (the largest anthracite port), patent fuel, ores, and the import and export of oil (National Oil Refineries). There is also a large ship-repairing industry. The trade is principally with France, Italy and Belgium. The municipal area is 24,193 acres, with a population at the census of 1931 of 164,825. Included in the borough is the health resort of Mumbles.

The principal buildings are the Norman castle (re-built in 1330), the Royal Institution of South Wales, founded in 1835 (containing Museum and Library), the University College at Singleton, and the 17th century Grammar School, founded by Hugh Gore. Swansea was chartered by King John, and incorporated as a borough by Henry III. The borough returns 2 members to Parliament.

Mayor (1932–33), D. Evans.
Recorder, E. W. Milner-Jones.
Town Clerk, H. L. Lang-Coath.

THE KINGDOM OF SCOTLAND.

Position and Extent—The Kingdom of Scotland occupies the northern portion of the main island of Great Britain and includes the Inner and Outer Hebrides, and the Orkney, Shetland, and many other islands. The Kingdom lies between 60° 51′ 30″ and 54° 38′ N. latitude and between 1° 45′ 32″ and 6° 14′ W. longitude, its southern neighbour being the Kingdom of England, with the Atlantic Ocean on the N. and W., and the North Sea on the E. The greatest length* of the mainland (Cape Wrath to the Mull of Galloway) is 274 miles, and the greatest breadth (Buchan Ness to Applecross) is 154 miles. The total area of the Kingdom is 31,510 square miles (land and water). The population (at the census of 1931) was 4 842 554, a decrease of 39,943 since the census of 1921.

Relief—There are three natural orographic divisions of Scotland. The Southern Uplands have their highest points in Merrick (2 764 feet), Rinns of Kells (2 668 feet) and Cairnsmuir of Carsphairn (2 612 feet) in Kirkcudbright, Hart fell (2,651 feet) in Dumfries and Whitecoomb (2 695 feet), in Peebles. The Central Lowlands include the valleys of the Tay, Forth and Clyde, and the cities of Edinburgh the capital of the Kingdom, and Glasgow, its principal seaport. The heather clad Northern Highlands extend almost from the extreme north of the mainland to the central lowlands and are divided into a northern and southern system by the Great Glen, they contain, in the central Grampian Hills, Ben Nevis (4 406 feet) the highest point in the British Isles and Ben Muich Dhui (4,296 feet). The Cheviot Hills form a natural boundary between Scotland and England, their highest point being Cheviot Hill (2 676 feet).

Hydrography—The principal river of Scotland is the Clyde (106 miles) one of the most important rivers in the world, with the greatest commercial estuary in Scotland. The Clyde is formed by the junction of Daer and Portrail water, and flows through the city and port of Glasgow to the Firth of Clyde. During its course it passes over the picturesque Falls of Clyde, the largest falls in the British Isles, Bonnington Linn (30 feet) Corra Linn (84 feet), Dundaff Linn (10 feet), and Stonebyres Linn (80 feet), above and below Lanark. The Tweed (96 miles) has important woollen industries (Tweeds) in its valley. The Tay, noted for its salmon, and the longest river in Scotland (117 miles), flows into the North Sea, with Dundee (the centre of the jute industry) on the estuary, which is spanned by the Tay Bridge (2 miles 73 yards), opened in 1887 to replace that destroyed by a gale (Dec 28, 1879). The Dee (90 miles), a noted salmon river, flows through scenery of unequalled beauty to the North Sea at Aberdeen. The Spey (110 miles), the swiftest flowing river in the British Isles, and also noted for its salmon and its scenery, flows into the Moray Firth. The Forth (66 miles), navigable to Stirling, is spanned by the Forth Bridge, constructed 1882 9 at a cost of £3,000,000, with a length of 5 330 feet (with approaches 8 295 feet).

The lochs are the principal hydrographic feature of the Kingdom both on the mainland and in many of the Islands. The largest in the Kingdom and in Great Britain is Loch Lomond (24 miles long), with Lochs Awe, Tay, Rannoch and Erricht in the Grampian valleys, Loch Ness (24 miles long and 800 feet deep), with Lochs Oich and Lochy, in the Great Glen, and Lochs Shin (20 miles) and Maree in the northern Highlands.

Orkney—About 6 miles N. of the Caithness coast, separated from the mainland by the Pentland Firth is the island county of Orkney, a group of 90 islands and islets ('holms and 'skerries), of which one third are inhabited. The total area of the group is 375½ square miles, with a population (1921) of 25,896. Kirkwall, in Pomona (or mainland) the largest island of the group is the capital of the county. Many of the Orkney (and Shetland) Islands contain brochs (Pictish towers) and other Pictish and Scandinavian remains. Scapa Flow between Pomona and Hoy, was the war station of the Grand Fleet from 1914 9 and the scene of the scuttling of the surrendered German High Seas Fleet (June 21, 1919).

Shetland—About 50 miles N. of Orkney (with the detached Fair Isle at 25 miles N.) is the island county of Shetland, a group of about 100 islands and islets of which 29 are inhabited. The total area of the group is 551 square miles, with a population (1921) of 27,921. Lerwick, in Mainland (the largest and principal island), is the capital of the county. Fair Isle, the southernmost of the group, is famous for hand knitted hosiery, and Unst for the finest of the Shetland woollen work, for which the county is famous. Muckle Flugga, about 1 mile N. of Unst, is the most northerly of the group and of the British Isles (60° 51′ 30″ N. lat.).

*Western Islands—Off the W. coast at varying distances, and extending from Sutherland to Argyll, are over 500 islands and islets, of which 102 are inhabited. The total area of these Western Islands is 2,812 square miles with a population of close on 80,000, but owing to the mountainous surface of the land only about 300 square miles are under cultivation. The Inner Hebrides include the island of Skye (643 square miles—capital, Portree famous as the refuge of Prince Charlie after his defeat at Culloden, Invernessshire, in 1746), which contains the Cuillins (Sgurr na Banachdich, 3,243 feet), Red Hills (Ben Cailliech, 2 403 feet) and many other picturesque mountains. Mull (367 square miles) containing Ben More (3 185 feet), Ben Buy (2,354 feet), and Ben Creach (2 289 feet), Jura

* Land's End to John o' Groats—The customary measurement of the Island of Great Britain is from the site of John o' Groat's house near Duncansby Head (Caithness (at the N.E. extremity of the island) to Land's End (Cornwall (at the S.W. extremity) a total distance of 597 miles in a straight line and (approximately) 900 by road. But the site of the house of John de Groot (with its 8 doors and octagonal table to solve the question of precedence between John and his 7 brothers) is about 4 miles S.W. of Duncansby Head, while Dunnet Head (also in Caithness) extends farther N. than Duncansby. John de Groot is believed to have obtained permission to settle in Caithness (from the Netherlands) in the reign of James IV. (1488–1513).

* The Hebrides—Until the closing years of the 13th century 'The Hebrides included other Scottish islands in the Firth of Clyde the peninsula of Kintyre (Argyllshire) the Isle of Man and the (Irish) Isle of Rathlin. The origin of the name is stated to be the Greek Eboudai latinized as Hebudes by Pliny and corrupted to its present form. The Norwegian name Sudreyar (Southern Islands) was latinized as Sodorenses, a name that survives in the Anglican bishopric of 'Sodor and Man.

(160 square miles), with a chain of hills culminating in the Paps of Jura, Beinn an Oir (2 571 feet, and Beinn Chaolais (2 407 feet), Islay (235 square miles), and many smaller islands The Outer Hebrides, separated from the mainland by the Minch, include Lewis with Harris (770 square miles), celebrated for its homespun Tweeds, North Uist, South Uist Barra and other islands Thirteen miles W of Stornoway (the largest town of Lewis and of the Hebrides) are the "Druidical remains of Callernish, a well preserved series of monolithic circles cruciform in general arrangement, but generally regarded as a heathen monument of the remote Stone Age

Climate —The climate of Scotland is influenced by the much indented coast line and (like that of South Britain) by the Gulf Stream Drift, which emerges from the Gulf of Mexico as a strong current about 30 miles in width with a speed of about 4 miles per hour the stream gradually loses its velocity and becomes shallower and cooler until at about 35° N lat (off Cape Hatteras) it ceases to be a distinct stream and its surface waters are carried across the Atlantic by the prevailing westerly winds The climate is more bracing and less treacherous than that of England the average duration of sunshine on the east coast being greater than on the east coast of England, while the south western section is no wetter or more relaxing than the corresponding section of England The mean winter temperature is in the neighbourhood of 35°, and that of summer about 58° Fahrenheit

The offices of the Scottish Travel Association are at 37, George Street, Edinburgh

EARLY HISTORY

Prehistoric Man —North Britain appears to have been invaded in Palaeolithic times by a succession of races, who died out or were exterminated by other immigrants The earliest race of which there is any record is that since known as the Picts, believed to be of non Aryan origin, and stated to have been named Picti by the Romans on account of the tribal habit of painting the body The Picts seem to have inhabited the whole of North Britain and to have spread over the north of Ireland Picts Houses are most frequent in the northern counties of Caithness and Sutherland and in the Orkney Islands, and it is generally believed that the Picts were driven northwards by later Celtic immigrants Celtic Gaedels and Brythons arrived from Belgic Gaul during the latter part of the Bronze Age and in the early Iron Age and except in the extreme north of the mainland and in the islands the civilization and speech of the people were definitely Celtic at the time of the Roman Invasion of Britain

The Roman Invasion —In A D 80 Julius Agricola extended the Roman conquests in Britain by advancing into Caledonia as far as the "Grampian Hills, but after a victory at Mons Graupius (since corrupted to "Grampius) he was recalled, and no further advance was made for about 60 years, when the Roman frontier was carried to the isthmus between the Forth and Clyde and marked by the Wall of Pius, towards which ran military roads from the Cheviots The Roman occupation of Southern Caledonia was not so effective as that of South Britain, and before the close of the second century the northern limit of Roman Britain had receded to Hadrian's Wall, from the Tyne to Solway Firth, where it was maintained until about A D 450

The Scots —During the later years of the Roman occupation the garrison was continually harassed by Pictish tribes north of the Wall, aided by Scots (the Gaelic tribe then dominant in Ireland) and when the garrison was withdrawn these Picts and Scots were the principal enemies of the Celtic Brythons, who are believed to have called in the Saxons to protect them from the invasions of their neighbours A relic of the struggle between Pict and Brython is still to be seen in the Catrail or Picts Work Dyke, of Roxburgh (from Torwoodlee near Galashiels, to Peel Fell in the Cheviots) Christianity was introduced into Southern Caledonia about 380 by missionaries from Romanized Britain, who penetrated to the northern districts and islands After the withdrawal (or absorption) of the Roman garrison of Britain there were many years of tribal warfare between the Picts and Scots the Brythonic Welsh (Welch) of Strath clyde (South west Scotland and Cumberland), and the Anglo Saxons of the Lothians The Welsh were isolated from their kinsmen in Wales by the victory of the West Saxons at Chester (613), and towards the close of the 9th century the Scots under Kenneth Macalpine became the dominant power in Caledonia In the reign of Malcolm I (943 954) the Brythons or Welsh (Welch) of Strathclyde were brought into subjection, the lowland kingdom of the English (Lothian) being conquered by Malcolm II (1005 1034) From the close of the 11th century until the middle of the 16th there were constant wars between Scotland and England the outstanding figures in the struggle being William Wallace, who defeated the English at Stirling Bridge (1297) and Robert Bruce, who won the victory of Bannockburn (1314) James IV and many of his nobles fell at the disastrous battle of Flodden (1513) and in 1603 James VI , the Stuart King of Scotland and the heir to the Tudor line of England (his mother Mary Queen of Scots was the great granddaughter of Henry VII), succeeded Queen Elizabeth on the throne his successors reigning as Sovereigns of Great Britain After the abdication (by flight) of James VII and II , the crown devolved upon William III (Grandson of Charles I) and Mary (daughter of James VII and II) and, their issue failing, upon Anne (second daughter of James VII and II) Anne's children died young, and the throne devolved upon George I (great grandson of James VI and I) In 1689 Graham of Claverhouse "roused the Highlands on behalf of James VII and II but died after a military success at Killiecrankie In 1715 armed risings led to the indecisive battle of Sheriffmuir, but the movement died down until 1745 when the "Young Pretender defeated the Royalist troops under Sir John Cope at Preston Pans and advanced to Derby in England (1746) From Derby the adherents of "James VIII and III (the title claimed for his father by the Young Pretender), fell back on the defensive and the Jacobite movement was finally crushed by the Royalist troops under the Duke of Cumberland at Culloden (April 16, 1746)

The Hebrides did not become part of the Kingdom of Scotland until 1266, when they were ceded to Alexander III by Magnus of Norway. Orkney and Shetland fell to the Scottish Crown as a pledge for the unpaid dowry of Margaret of Denmark, wife of James III , in 1468, the Danish suzerainty being formally relinquished in 1590

Position and Extent —Ireland lies in the Atlantic Ocean, to the West of Great Britain, and is separated from Scotland by the North Channel and from Wales by the Irish Sea and St George's Channel The land area of the island is 32 531 sq miles and its geographical position between 51° 26′ and 55° 21′ N latitude and from 5° 25 to 10° 30′ W longitude The greatest length of the island from N E to S W (Inis Head to Mizen Head) is 302 miles, and the greatest breadth, from E to W (Dundrum Bay to Armagh Head), is 174 miles On the N coast of Achill Island (Co Mayo) are the highest cliffs in the British Islands 2 000 feet sheer above the sea Ireland is occupied for the greater part of its area by the Central Plain with an elevation of 50 to 350 ft above mean sea level, with isolated mountain ranges near the coast line The principal mountains, with their highest

West, the Connemara Mountains (Twelve Pins 2 695 ft) of County Galway in the West, Macgillicuddy's Reeks (Carrantuohill 3 414 ft the highest point in Ireland) in the South West, and the Galtee Mountains (3 018 ft) of County Tipperary and the Knockmealdown (2,609 ft) and Comeragh Mountains (2 470 ft) of County Waterford in the South The principal river of Ireland (and the longest in the British Isles) is the Shannon (240 miles) rising in County Cavan and draining the central plain The Shannon flows through a chain of loughs to the city of Limerick, and thence to an estuary on the western Atlantic seaboard The Slaney flows into Wexford Harbour, the Liffey to Dublin Bay the Boyne to Drogheda the Lee to Cork Harbour the Blackwater to Youghal Bay, and the Suir Nore and Barrow to Waterford Harbour As in Scotland the principal hydrographic feature is the Loughs of which Lough Neagh (150 sq miles) in the north-east is the largest in Ireland and the British Isles others being the Shannon Chain of Allen Boderg Forbes, Ree and Derg and the Erne Chain of Gowna, Oughter Lower Erne and Erne in the central plain, Melvin, Gill Gara and Conn in the north and Corrib and Mask (joined by a hidden channel) in the south In County Kerry to the east of Macgillicuddy's Reeks are the famous Lakes of Killarney The climate of Ireland is more equable than that of Great Britain and the rainfall is more evenly distributed The variation in mean temperature is only about 3° Fahrenheit, the summer extremes being 59° in the N and 62° in the S

Primitive Man —Although little is known concerning the earliest inhabitants of Ireland there are many traces of neolithic man throughout the island while the use of bronze implements appears to have become known about the middle of the 17th century B C In the later Bronze Age a Celtic race of Goidels appear to have invaded the island and in the early Iron Age Brythons from South Britain are believed to have effected settlements in the south east while Picts from North Britain established similar settlements in the north Towards the close of the Roman occupation of Britain the dominant tribe in the island was that of the Scoti who afterwards established themselves in Scotland

Legendary History — According to Irish legends the island was settled by a Milesian race who came from Scythia by way of Spain and established the Kingdom of Tara about 500 B C The supremacy of the Ardri (high king) of Tara was acknowledged by eight lesser kingdoms (Munster Connaught Ailech Oriel Ulidia Meath Leinster and Ossory) ruled by descendants of the eight sons of Miled The basalt columns on the coast of Antrim eight miles from Portrush, known as the Giant's Causeway are connected with the legendary history of Ireland as the remnants of a bridge built in the time of Finn M'Coul (Fingal) to connect Antrim with Scotland (Staffa)

Christianity —Christianity did not become general until the advent of St Patrick St Patrick was born in Britain about 389 and was taken to Ireland as a slave about sixteen years later escaping to Gaul at the age of 22 In 432 he was consecrated Bishop at Auxerre and landed in Wicklow to establish and organise the Christian religion throughout the island

Later History —The Roman conquest of Britain was not extended to Ireland and little is known of the history of the country until the invasions of Northmen (Norwegians and Danes) towards the close of the 8th century A D The Norwegians were distinguished as Findgaill (White Strangers) and the Danes as Dubgaill (Black Strangers), names which survive in 'Fingall, 'MacDougall and 'MacDowell," while the name of the island itself is held to be derived from the Scandinavian Ira land (land of the Irish) the names of the Provinces being survivals of Norse dialect forms (Ulaids tir, Laigins-tir Mumans tir and Kunnak tir) The outstanding events in the encounters with the Northmen are the Battle of Tara (980), at which the Hy Neill king Maelsechlainn II defeated the Scandinavians of Dublin and the Hebrides under their king Amlaib Cuarán and the Battle of Clontarf (1014) by which the Scandinavian power was completely broken After Clontarf the supreme power was disputed by the O Brians of Munster, the O Neills of Ulster, and the O Connors of Connaught with varying fortunes. In 1152 Dermod MacMurrough (Diarmait Mac Murchada) the deposed king of Leinster sought assistance in his struggle with Ruaidhri O Connor (the high king of Ireland) and visited Henry II, the Norman king of England Henry authorized him to obtain armed support in England for the recovery of his kingdom and Dermod enlisted the services of Richard de Clare, the Norman Earl of Pembroke afterwards known as Strongbow who landed at Waterford (Aug 23, 1170) with 200 knights and 1 000 other troops for the reconquest of Leinster where he eventually settled after marriage with Dermod's daughter In 1172 (Oct 18) Henry II himself landed in Ireland with a force larger than Strongbow's, and obtained homage from the Irish kings, but Anglo Norman rule underwent many fluctuations in the succeeding centuries, being confined in the early 15th century within the English 'Pale" of 600 square miles In the reign of Henry VII English rule was greatly extended and the administration of Irish affairs was anglicised by Robert Poynings Lord Deputy of Ireland, who summoned the Parliament of Drogheda (Dec 1494) at which were enacted the Statutes of Drogheda, afterwards known as Poynings' Law, making the legislature of Ireland subordinate to and dependent on that of England A later parliament conferred on Henry VIII the title of King of Ireland.

LONDON: PRINTED BY WILLIAM CLOWES AND SONS, LIMITED, DUKE STREET, STAMFORD STREET, S.E.1

The Indian Empire extends over a territory larger than the Continent of Europe without Russia. Legally, "British India" means all territories governed by the King-Emperor through the Governor-General of India, or through any Governor or other officer subordinate to the Governor-General of India, while "India" means British India, together with any territories of any prince or chief under the suzerainty of His Majesty, exercised through the Governor-General of India or through any Governor or other officer subordinate to the Governor-General of India (Act 52 & 53 Vict., c. 63, s. 18). There are tracts of tribal territory on the N.W. and N.E. frontiers under the political influence, though not yet under the administrative rule, of the Indian Government.

Boundaries.—The political boundary of India marches with Persia and Afghanistan from the Gulf of Oman to Povalo Schvéikovskoi on the Pashdumbash Pamir. From this point the frontier—in many parts not yet clearly defined—touches the Chinese Empire and Nepal, till the limits of French Indo-China are reached on the Upper Mekong. The Indian frontier, on leaving the Mekong, marches with Siam till it reaches the sea at Victoria Point, half-way down the Malay peninsula. Beyond the sea the Indian Empire includes the Andaman and Nicobar Islands, the Laccadive and Minicoy Islands. Aden and Perim, besides protectorates over Socotra, Bahrein, and various chiefships along the coast from Aden to the Persian Gulf. Continental India, including Baluchistan, reaches from 8° to 37° N. latitude, and from 61° to 101° E. longitude. Delhi, the new capital, lies in 77° E. long.

Area and Population.—The total area of India proper is about 1,805,000 square miles, with a population of nearly 353 millions (about three-fourths of the population of the British Empire). The British Provinces as distinguished from the Indian States comprise 61 per cent. of the area, and nearly 77 per cent. of the population. The results of the 1931 Census (revised totals) are as follows:

Physical features.—Excluding Burma, which forms no part of the Indian peninsula, we may broadly divide the country into three sections, viz., the Himalayan region, the northern river-plains and the southern table-land

The Himalayas.—The Himalayas (which lie partly beyond the frontier), with their southern offshoots, form the natural northern boundary of India. The Himalayan range runs for 1,500 miles from N.W. to S.E., with a varying breadth of 150 to 200 miles, and attains a general height of 20,000 feet above the plain, culminating in the loftiest peaks yet measured on the globe—Mount Everest, 29,141 feet; Kunchinjunga, 28,146 feet, and Dhaulagiri, 26,826 feet near the centre of the range, and Mount Godwin Austen, 28,250 feet, near its junction with the Hindu Kush. The line of perpetual snow is at about 16,000 feet. The Himalayas collect and store up water for the plains below. The slopes afford a representation of the tropical zone (especially on the southern slopes to the E.), the temperate zone (particularly to the S.W. of the range) and the arctic zone as the upward journey is taken from the plains. In the Himalayas are several sanatoria including Murree, Simla, Mussoorie, Naini Tal, and Darjiling. Himalayan vegetation includes such varied species as the tree fern, ilex, pine, oak, fir, deodar (cedar), rhododendron, barley, oats, millet and many domestic vegetables. The fauna are as varied as the flora, and include the bison, musk deer, yak, wild sheep and goat, bear, elephant, monkey, and tiger, with eagles, partridges, and pheasants. Between the Himalayas and the plains to the S.E. is the great fever haunted Terai or Duar jungle, densely forest covered and full of big game.

The Great Plain.—The northern river plains, lying at the foot of the Himalayas, comprise the rich alluvial plains watered by the Indus, the Ganges, the Lower Brahmaputra, and their tributaries. At no great distance from one another, four rivers take their rise in the Himalayas. The sources of two are on the north side the Indus, which flows westward for 1,800 miles, and the Tsan-po or Brahmaputra, which flows eastward for nearly 1,500 miles. The other two on the southern slope, are the Sutlej which after flowing W. and S.W. for 900 miles and collecting various other streams joins the Indus, and the Ganges, which, during a journey S.E. and E. of about 1,550 miles drains almost all the Bengal plain. The Brahmaputra, after flowing along the northern side as far as the eastern extremity of the Himalayas, turns sharply to the S., then to the W. and finally joins the Ganges 75 miles from where their combined streams enter the Bay of Bengal. Thus the Himalayas supply India with the water gathered on both slopes. The Indus and Ganges, with their tributaries, are the source of an extensive system of irrigation by canals. The richest most populous and most historically famous part of India lies in the basins of these great rivers. Formerly the Ganges was the only great highway of Bengal; it is still the fertiliser and the water carrier. But a close network of railways is increasingly used for transport. The richness of the Indo-Gangetic plain, with its ample rainfall enables it to support a dense population, almost wholly agricultural. The density of the population rises in some districts to 900 per square mile. On the other hand, in Baluchistan there are only 9 persons to the square mile. The population has increased most in the densest areas and pressure on the soil is severe in parts of Bihar and the United Provinces. In Northern India there are two harvests, rabi (spring) crops being reaped in March and April, kharif (autumn) crops in October to December. In the north we find wheat, pulse, maize, millet, barley, and tea, while in the south indigo, cotton, sugar-cane, jute, oilseeds, tobacco, opium, and spices are produced. Among the fauna are monkeys, panthers, tigers, leopards, hyenas, jackals, squirrels, elephants, deer, crocodiles, and snakes. Salt, mica, and coal are the chief minerals. The Ganges delta yields rice, bamboos, and a large variety of palms. The Aravalli range, the primeval chain of India, divides Rajputana from the Central India States. To the N.W. of the peninsula lies the mountainous, barren, and thinly populated region of Baluchistan.

The Deccan.—Just as the Himalayas on the N. and the Hindu Kush and Suleiman Mountains on the N.W. form natural barriers of defence for Hindustan, so do the Vindhya Mountains, running almost due E. from the head of the Gulf of Cambay, north of the Nerbudda River, form a firm southern boundary to the river plains of Northern India. Southern India, or the Deccan, is a plateau of triangular shape and very old geological formation, bounded on two sides by the Malabar and Coromandel coasts which converge at Cape Comorin, and on the third by the Vindhyas. The Eastern and Western Ghauts all but complete this environing triangle of mountain ranges. In the extreme N.W., south of the Vindhyas, and parallel to them, but north of the Western Ghauts, we find the Nerbudda and the Tapti flowing westwards, their basins being sharply defined by the Satpura Mountains, which lie midway between them. As the Western Ghauts lie close to the coast and afford no exit for rivers there are no streams on the Malabar coast south of the Tapti, all the rivers flow eastwards, through defiles in the Eastern Ghauts, into the Bay of Bengal. The four chief rivers are the Mahanadi, in the extreme N.E. (520 m.), the Godavery (900 m.), the Kistna (800 m.), and the Cauvery (472 m.), at intervals further to the south. The physical geography of Southern India has shaped its history the S W coast, shut in by mountains is very primitive and moves slowly the S E, open and easy of access by sea and towards the interior, has made great progress The mountain slopes of this region, especially those of the Western Ghauts, which rise to 8 000 feet in the Nilgiris, are still covered with the splendid vegetation of primeval forests Teak, ebony, satinwood, sandalwood, palm, and bamboo abound The jungles in the Terai are very deadly The tiger, bison, leopard, deer, and various smaller game afford sport Snakes are found everywhere In the valleys and on the higher plains many valuable crops are raised chiefly rice millet, cotton, oilseeds, coffee, tea, indigo, tobacco and chinchona The black cotton soil is very fertile There is irrigation by dams, wells, tanks, and canals The southern tableland has furnished considerable supplies of minerals At present the minerals principally worked are coal, manganese ore, mica, monazite, and gold

Burma —Beyond the Bay of Bengal is the large province of Burma, watered by the Irawaddy and its tributaries and by the Salween The delta region is flat, further inland are hills and rolling downs, while the north is mountainous Rice is the chief staple Millet cotton, sesamum and tobacco are also grown The forests particularly of teak, make a considerable contribution to the exports Petroleum is produced on a considerable scale, and jade, wolfram, and rubies are mined The fauna include monkeys, jackals, tigers, elephants, bison, and deer

Climate —About half of India is within the tropics, but the greatest extremes of heat and cold are in the N W In the Himalayas the climate is moist and cold In Northern India it is dry, and the winters are rather cold In tropical Southern India the climate is more equable Calcutta, Bombay, and Madras all have an equable climate, owing to proximity to the sea India depends for its fertility upon the monsoon rains The S W. monsoon brings moisture from the ocean south of the Equator, and reaches the west coast early in June and the northern provinces late in June The mountains arrest these currents and precipitate rainfall, which averages 60 inches in the sub-Himalayan region, 39 inches in the Indo-Gangetic plain, and 30 inches in the Deccan but is small in Sind and Rajputana Madras benefits by the N E monsoon in the autumn

Population —The sixth general census of India was taken on the 26th February 1931 The returns (revised and corrected totals) gave a population of 352,837 778 as compared with 318,942 480 in 1921 (for details see p 721), an increase in the ten years of 10 6 per cent The census total of 1931 is divisible into 271 526 933 (or nearly 77 per cent) for British India and 81 830 845 (or over 23 per cent) for Indian States India is not overpopulated, for two-thirds of the people live on one-quarter of the area In Burma, Assam, and elsewhere a much larger population might subsist There were in 1931 37 towns with a population of over 100 000 Urban areas of over 5,000 people comprise only about 10 per cent of the total population

Caste, Tribe, Race or Nationality —Owing to the operation of the caste system India is broken up into a large number of mutually exclusive aggregates, the members of which are forbidden by an inexorable social law to marry outside the group to which they themselves belong A caste may be defined as a collection of families or groups of families, bearing a common name, which usually denotes or is associated with a specific occupation The boundary of a caste may be said to be fixed by the rule restricting intermarriage, but its social status depends on the occupation of its members and their habits in respect of diet The chief castes and races are (Census 1921)—Sheikh (33 388 000) Brahman (14,255,000), Chamar (11,264 000), Ahir (9 032,000), Rajput (9 773,000) Burmese (8,371,000). Jat (7,567 000), Maratha (6 566,000)

Religions (Census 1931) —The population by religions in 1931 includes 239,193 635 Hindus (68 per cent of the total), 77 677 545 Muhammadans (22 per cent), 12 786 806 Buddhists (3 6 per cent), nearly all in Burma, leaving nearly 6 per cent for all other religions, including 6,296,763 Christians (3 773 087 of whom are in Madras Travancore, and Cochin), 4,335,771 Sikhs 1,252,105 Jains, 111,853 Parsis, and 8,391,065 described as Tribal, who believe in magic and strive to propitiate impersonal forces Minor Religions and Religions not returned, 459,873 The Muhammadans, who are increasing faster than the Hindus are influenced by the caste system and other Hindu characteristics No particulars of religion are available of 2,308,221 persons (Bombay 75 735 Burma 19,649, and North-West Frontier Province, 2,212,837) The number of Indian Christians has increased nearly threefold since 1872

Occupations —Over 72 per cent of the population was in 1921 dependent on agricultural and pastoral pursuits. Industrial occupations support 33 000,000 persons, of whom nearly one-fourth are dependent on textile industries The most important of these are industries connected with cotton, which employ nearly 6,500 000 persons the majority of whom depend on hand-weaving The public services comprise over 4,825,000 persons against infant marriage and enforced widowhood is gaining ground There were in 1921 over 26,834,000 widows in India The males outnumbered the females in 1921 in the proportion of 1,000 to 945 and 1 000 to 943 in 1931

Sex —Marriage is almost universal owing to religious obligations The movement

Languages—India has 222 vernacular languages, of extraordinary variety. The languages spoken by 316,056 000 persons in 1921 are grouped in seven families The principal languages are Western Hindi (spoken by 96,714 000 persons), Bengali (49,295,000), Telugu (23,601,000), Marathi (18 798,000), Tamil (18,780,000), Punjabi (16,234 000), Rajasthani (12 681,000) after which come Oriya, Kanarese, Gujarati, Burmese and Malayalam Hindustani, a dialect of Hindi containing a large number of Persian and Arabic words is the lingua franca of India Hindustani and Hindi have become the chief literary languages of Hindustan English is understood by many

A Brief Sketch of Indian History

ALEXANDER'S invasion of India (326 B C) is the first landmark of Indian history A dim outline of earlier events can be traced from the evidences of race and language from the traditions contained in ancient Indian literature from accounts by later Greek and Chinese writers and from coins and inscriptions The oldest Indian books are supposed to date from about 1500 B C they are written in Sanskrit a language akin to Persian and to the principal European languages The writers of these books were Aryans a race which as their traditions indicate, came into India from north of the Hindu Kush They found in India and conquered a population of yellow skinned type in the Himalayan districts and a short dark skinned race of low civilisation

The principal latest official publications relating to India are —Parliamentary Papers (session 1931 32)—Indian Finance (Supplementary and Extending) Act 1931 (H C 13) Moral and Material Progress Report 1930 31 (India in 1930 31) (H C 116) East India Budget 1932 33 (H C 104) Statistical Abstract 1920 21 to 1929 30 (Cmd 4109) Accounts and Estimates 1931 32 Explanatory Memorandum (Cmd 3969) 1932 33 (Cmd 4161) Emergency Measures and Correspondence between the Viceroy and Mr Gandhi (Cmd 4014) Burma (Kentung)—Siam boundary (Meh Sai River) Agreement (Cmd 4112) Commercial relations between India and Poland, Convention signed May 8 1931 (Cmd 4119) Round Table Conference 1931 Second Session — Prime Minister's Statement (Cmd 3972) Proceedings in Plenary Session (Cmd 3997) Burma Round Table Conference Report and Prime Minister's Statement (Cmd 4004) Constitutional Reforms Federal Finance Committee Report (Cmd 4069) Franchise Committee Report (Cmd 4086) Indian States (Financial) Committee Report (Cmd 4103) Communal Decision (Cmd 4147) Non Parliamentary Publications—British Trade in India 1930 31 Half Yearly Returns of Loans raised in England Home Accounts, 1930 31 Estimate of Revenue and Expenditure 1931 32 Indian Regulations relating to Passengers' Baggage Round Table Conference —Federal Structure and Minorities Committee Proceedings, Indian Franchise Committee Memoranda Burma Round Table Conference 1931 32, Report and Proceedings Government of India Publications—Reports of Committees on—Drugs (Chopra) Frontier Regulations Orissa Central Banking Finances of Sind Government of India Act with Rules and Notifications thereunder Sind Conference 1932 Report and Appendices Published by the High Commissioner for India—Reports of the Indian Trade Commissioner, 1930 31 and 1931 32 Parliamentary and Non Parliamentary Papers can be purchased through any Bookseller, or direct from H M Stationery Office, Imperial House Kingsway, W C 2 Government of India publications can be obtained from the High Commissioner for India, India House, Aldwych, W C 2

tion in the rest of India Of both these types there are still survivals The religion and metaphysics of the Aryans are to be found in the Vedas and Upanishads, their epics the Mahabharata and Ramayana, extol their mythical heroes while in the Code of Manu we find a picture of Indian society, rather as the priestly caste of the day wished it to exist than as it actually existed The ascendancy of the Brahman priesthood over the soldier class of Kshetriyas is represented as fully established The system of caste originating in the attitude of the Aryas (kinsmen) to the dark and servile aborigines generally prevails and the people are organised in village communities In the sixth century B C a new religion arose called Buddhism Its founder was Gautáma a prince of the Kshetriya caste who took the name of Buddha the awakened and died about 487 B C His supposed remains were discovered near Peshawar in 1909 His tenets are contained in the Tripitaka the Buddhist gospel Buddhism was in India itself mainly a social reform a revolt against the pride of caste and the exclusiveness of the Brahman priesthood It prevailed widely from 250 B C to 350 A D but was never quite general and existed side by side with Brahmanism which it never succeeded in ousting At length it lost ground less through persecution than through a change in popular feeling and before the twelfth century it had become practically extinct in India itself though it still flourishes not only in Siam China and Japan but also in Nepal Burma and Ceylon Its decline in India was accompanied by a revival of Brahmanism much modified

According to Herodotus the twentieth satrapy of Persia at one time included part of the north west of India Alexander (326 B C) did not penetrate beyond the tributaries of the Indus though he sailed down the river At his death his Indian possessions fell to Seleucus whose ambassador Megasthenes (306 B C) has left an account of the country under the rule of Chandragupta the Greek Sandracottus Megasthenes describes the democratic village communities of the Punjab speaks of the people as brave and truthful and adverse to litigation and notes the absence of slavery Asoka (272 231 B C) the grandson of Chandragupta whose edicts on stone pillars throw light upon this period was a convert to Buddhism which became the State religion Our last contributors to a knowledge of India before the period of continuous authentic history are the Buddhist pilgrims from China who visited the country between 399 and 695 A D

The influence of the Greek conquest was swept away by the Scythians who poured in many waves between about 165 B C and 320 A D over Northern India Their inroads left a lasting influence on the character of the population and profoundly modified the religious beliefs and domestic institutions of the Hindus The sixth century was a period of confusion The emperor Harsha (606 648) after many years of fighting made himself master of Northern India and ended his reign in piety and peace From about 650 to 950 anarchy prevailed

The Arab conquest of Persia towards the middle of the seventh century brought the successors of Muhammad to the Indus and in N W India they made some temporary acquisitions but three centuries were to pass before the foundations of a durable Muhammadan empire were laid It was in 999 that Mahmud of Ghazni (in Afghanistan) began a long series of incursions into India no fewer than fifteen expeditions taking place between 999 and 1027 one of which carried him beyond the Jumna while another ended in the capture of Somnath in Kathiawar The succeeding dynasties of Afghan kings held power in India for 500 years but their advance was gradual, for it was not till 1206 that Delhi was taken and the greater part of Hindustan annexed by Kutb ud din whose memory is perpetuated by the Kutb Minar near Delhi The first Muhammadan invasion of the Deccan took place in 1294

THE MOGUL EMPIRE —The Muhammadan Mongols or Moguls after overrunning Central and Western Asia arrived in 1219 under Genghis Khan on the frontiers of India but did not cross the Indus During the reign of the last monarch of the Jaghlak line the famous Tamerlane (or Timur) burst into India at the head of a mighty host captured and sacked Delhi in 1398 and laid waste a great part of Hindustan A period of weak dynasties followed frequent invasions from without and general misrule and anarchy within paved the way for larger conquests by the Mogul Emperors In 1526 Babar a direct descendant of Timur overthrew the last of the Afghan kings at Panipat and founded the MOGUL EMPIRE which at his death extended from the Oxus river in Central Asia to the borders of the Gangetic delta His son Humayun (1530 56) lost the whole of the territory conquered by Babar but recovered a portion of it (including Delhi) shortly before his death His victor was Sher Shah Sur who reigned from 1540 1545 Akbar the Great Humayun's son (1556 1605) spent a long reign in firmly establishing the empire at his death his dominions extended over Kabul, Kandahar, and all India north of the Nerbudda Moreover, of the Muhammadan kingdoms of the Deccan Ahmednagar Berar and Bidar were absorbed and Khandesh and Golconda forced to pay tribute Akbar followed up his conquests by important financial reforms He was tolerant in religion and just to all classes of his subjects Among the great men of his time were the Hindu Todar Mall his able finance minister Abul Fazl the historian of his reign and Faizi the poet Jahangir (1605 27) received in 1616 Sir Thomas Roe the ambassador of James I Under Shah Jahan (1027 1658) the Mogul Empire reached the zenith of its glory Many stately buildings including the Taj Mahal at Agra testify to his magnificence and taste The close of Shah Jahan's reign was embittered by the rivalries of his four sons Aurangzeb (1658 1707) defeated and killed his brothers and kept his father a prisoner till death (1666) Aurangzeb had great ability and courage but religious intolerance distrust and dissimulation characterised his chequered career His reign in some respects splendid ended in failure He brought the Mogul Empire to its greatest extent by conquering and incorporating all India as far south as Tanjore But from this time the decline of the empire began Four sons disputed the right of succession, and Bahadur Shah (1707 12) secured the crown After four short lived emperors Muhammad Shah (1719 48) grandson of Bahadur came to the throne His viceroys became rebellious, and so contributed to the success of the Mahrattas who subdued the Deccan About 1724 part of the Deccan became practically independent under Nizam ul Mulk (ancestor of the present Nizam) In 1738 to avenge an alleged insult Nadir Shah of Persia invaded India captured Delhi, gave orders for a general slaughter of the inhabitants and carried off enormous plunder All the country west of the Indus was lost to the empire On the death of Muhammad the phantom rulers Ahmad Shah (1748 1754) and Alamgir II (1754 1759) occupied the throne, and were succeeded by Shah Alam (1759 1806) who came to terms with the British

THE MAHRATTAS — As the Moguls declined the power of the Mahrattas increased They were Hindus and their country was in the Western Ghats to the east of Bombay The founder of their power was Sivaji (1627 1680), a chieftain of the family of Bhonsla, who became famous by his raids in the Deccan and aimed at founding a Hindu kingdom Balaji Vishvanath (1712 1720) Peishwa or Prime Minister succeeded in making that office of paramount importance and hereditary in his family, Sivaji's descendants thenceforth holding a merely nominal position Under the Peishwas aided by Scindia Holkar and the Gaekwar who formed independent States about this time the Mahrattas rapidly extended their territory and influence, conquering Gujarat, Malwa Berar and Orissa Although they were severely defeated at Panipat in 1761 by Ahmad Shah the Afghan invader, they remained for some time the first power in India and were the most dangerous opponents of the English Too often their rule degenerated into a system of organised plunder With the Pindaris, a horde of freebooters who followed in their train, they became a scourge to the country It was not until both Pindaris and Mahrattas were finally overthrown in 1818 that India enjoyed the blessings of internal peace The Mahratta empire containing within itself the seeds of disintegration was fated to bend before the superior sway of Europeans who had gradually extended their power in India

THE SIKHS —The Punjab lay beyond the reach of the Mahrattas There the decay of the Mogul empire gave the opportunity, not to a nation, but to a religious sect united by military discipline to establish territorial dominion The founder of the Sikh religion was Nanak Shah, a Hindu reformer, born near Lahore in 1469 He preached the one God, purity of life, and abolition of caste He had ten successors, named gurus or apostles, ending with Govind Singh (1708). The sect though cruelly persecuted, survived, and gradually adopted a political organisation It became a power under Ranjit Singh (1780 1839) who, revolting against the Afghan Amir, by whom he had been appointed Governor of Lahore, founded the kingdom of the Punjab The powerful army he had organised brought on the collision with the British and after two wars the Sikh kingdom was annexed, and became the province of the Punjab (1849)

EUROPEAN ADVENTURE —From time immemorial the lucrative trade of Europe with India and the farther East has enormously enriched in turn each nation that has held it In the 15th century it was mainly possessed by the Venetians on the European side, and by the Arabs on the Eastern side The chief trading centres of the Arabs were Calicut, Ormuz, Aden, and Malacca Seeing the large profits to be derived from this trade the Christian nations of Europe in the 15th century sought to obtain a share Hence the ardour of the navigators who set out to discover an ocean route to India The sea route round the Cape of Good Hope was discovered by Vasco da Gama, who anchored before Calicut in May, 1498 From that time until they lost their naval supremacy, a century later, the Portuguese enjoyed practically a monopoly of Indian trade The first Portuguese viceroy Francis of Almeida (1505 1509), established numerous factories and fortresses while his successor, Alfonso de Albuquerque captured Goa (1510) and extended the Portuguese dominion notably on the Malabar coast This dominion for 60 years from 1542 was tantamount to an entire regulation of the Asiatic coast trade with Europe from the Persian Gulf to Japan It was stained by great cruelty Up to the union of the crowns of Spain and Portugal in 1580 under Philip II, the Portuguese brought Indian products to Lisbon whence the Dutch carried them to other parts of Europe But when Philip II, on account of the Dutch revolt, shut Lisbon against them, the Dutch were driven to trade directly with the East In 1602 by amalgamating existing trading companies they formed The Dutch East India Company, and the principal Portuguese settlements in the East were gradually captured By 1661 the Portuguese held only those remnants of their Indian possessions which they still hold The Dutch, who had some small trading factories were in turn forced by the British to relax their hold on India French and Danish East India Companies were established in 1601 and 1616 respectively The latter achieved little but, as will be seen directly, the French had a brief but brilliant period of influence in the middle of the 18th century

ENGLISH DOMINION —At the close of the 16th century the English became eager to share in the profits of Indian commerce After some smaller ventures the London East India Company was incorporated by Queen Elizabeth by royal charter on 31st December, 1600 There were 217 subscribers of the capital of £68,373, and the official title was "The Governor and Company of Merchants of London trading to the East Indies A second charter in 1609 made the Company's privileges perpetual The Portuguese resisted the new competitors, who nevertheless obtained a permanent footing at Surat after several stubborn engagements off Swally in 1612 In 1615 the British ambassador Sir Thomas Roe supported by the Emperor Jahangir greatly improved the position of the Company In 1639 the English acquired a strip of land on the east coast built a factory there, fortified it and named it Fort St George in 1653 this settlement of Madras became a Presidency In Charles I's reign rival enterprises led to confusion and piratical excesses, but in 1657 co operation and discipline were secured by the charter granted by Cromwell to a single company comprising the whole body of merchants The charter was renewed by Charles II, in whose reign the Company enjoyed great prosperity When in 1662, Charles II married Katharine of Braganza, a part of her dowry from Portugal was the Island of Bombay, in 1668 he transferred all his rights over it to the Company for an annual payment of £10 In 1687 Bombay replaced Surat as the seat of the western Presidency Although in 1633 the Company had obtained certain treaty rights in Bengal from the Mogul, and in 1651 a factory had been established at Hooghly, yet in that part of India they held no territory as in Bombay and Madras In 1688 the Muhammadan rulers forced them to abandon their settlement but being invited to return they laid in 1690 amid swamp and jungle the foundations of the Presidency of Fort William which was destined to develop into the city of Calcutta In 1693 a new charter was granted to the company In 1698 a charter was granted to a rival company called The English East India Company to distinguish it from the old 'London Company' After a brief period of conflict and trade losses the rival companies came to terms in 1702, and in 1708 they were amalgamated under the title of The United Company of Merchants of England trading to the East Indies

When Great Britain engaged in war with France in 1744 the rival Companies of England and France came into collision with the result that Madras was captured in 1746 Had Dupleix been well supported from home, he might have founded a French empire in India The first reverses of the English were retrieved by Clive whose gallant defence of Arcot (1751) was followed up by a series of brilliant movements culminating in the utter defeat of the French army by Coote at Wandiwash in 1760 and in the capture of Pondicherry in 1761 which completed the ruin of the French Company Since then the territory retained by the French in India has been insignificant and in it they are forbidden by treaty to hold any considerable military force The tragedy of the Black Hole of Calcutta (1756) summoned Clive from Madras and his victory at Plassey over the Nawab of Bengal in 1757 made British influence predominant

Clive was appointed first Governor of Bengal in 1758 In 1760 he returned home and in 1763 the English were again embroiled in Bengal but completely defeated their opponents at Buxar (1764) In 1765 Clive (now Lord Clive) returned to Bengal as Governor and before he left finally in 1767 he succeeded in reforming the services in which great abuses existed Owing to Clive's efforts the Company in 1765 received from the Emperor at Delhi the diwani or fiscal administration of Bengal Bihar and Orissa with the Northern Circars (Madras) and 25 000 000 people came under their government Thus were laid the foundations of England's territorial dominion in India

After an interval of misrule Warren Hastings (1772 85) was appointed Governor of Bengal and in 1774 Governor General on the creation of that office under the Regulating Act of 1773 He vigorously reformed the revenue system and judicial procedure Hastings was the first great administrative organiser of the British possessions He greatly increased the power and territory of the Company, not withstanding the opposition of his Council Mysore in 1760 had been seized by Hyder Ali a Mussalman adventurer and a powerful and inveterate enemy of the English By repelling Hyder Ali's memorable invasion of the Carnatic (1780) and defeating the triple alliance of the Nizam the Mahrattas and Hyder Ali Hastings probably saved British India On his return to England he was impeached on a number of charges, but acquitted

The first administration of Lord Cornwallis (1786 93) was marked by a thorough reform of the Company's Civil Service by the introduction of a permanent settlement of the land revenue, by a reform of the judicial system and by the third Mysore War in which he defeated Tippoo, the son and successor of Hyder Ali The rule of Sir John Shore (1793 98) was uneventful

The administration of the Marquess Wellesley 1798 1805) was distinguished by many important events Tippoo as hostile to the English as Hyder, was in 1798 in secret correspondence with the French, who were then dominant in the military councils of the Nizam and of Scindia were established in Mauritius and under Napoleon then engaged in his Egyptian campaign were aiming at a great Eastern Empire Lord Wellesley saw the necessity of crushing this dangerous Power and the Fourth Mysore War ended in the capture of Seringapatam (1799) the death of Tippoo and the conquest and restoration of Mysore to a representative of the family of Hindu Rajas whom Hyder Ali had dethroned The Treaty of Bassein (1802) broke up the Mahratta confederacy but led to the Second and Third Mahratta Wars which curtailed the power of Scindia and Holkar and increased the strength and extent of the Company's dominions Lastly Lord Wellesley developed the Indian subsidiary system of subsidiary alliances with Native States which aimed at making the British the one paramount Power, while giving greater security than the balance of power attempted by his predecessors Wellesley doubled the territories of the Company, and transformed a mercantile body into a political power with a preponderating influence throughout India During the brief second administration of Lord Cornwallis (1805) and that of Sir G. Barlow (1805 7) Wellesley's policy of subsidiary alliances was reversed

Lord Minto (1807 13) established peaceful relations with the Punjab Afghanistan and Persia through the mediation of Metcalfe, Elphinstone and Malcolm respectively On the renewal of the Company's charter in 1813 the monopoly of Indian trade was abolished

Under the Marquess of Hastings 1814 23) a severe struggle with Nepaul ended with the Treaty of Sagouli (1816) which still regulates India's relations with that State The annexation in 1818 of the territory of the Mahratta Peishwa enlarged Bombay Presidency to its present dimensions Lord Hastings in the same year crushed the marauding Pindaris of Central India who had devastated the country in all directions Reviving Lord Wellesley's policy of alliances he secured on their existing basis the relations of the Supreme Power with the feudatory States of Rajputana and Central India He encouraged education Lord Amherst (1823 8) succeeded Lord Hastings Encroachments on British districts by the King of Ava and his insolent refusal of all redress led to the first Burmese War which cost 20 000 lives and nearly £14 000 000 but gave to India the provinces of Arakan and Tenasserim and, practically Assam

While Lord William Bentinck was Governor General (1828 35) steam communication with India was introduced suttee (or widow burning) was abolished educated natives were admitted more freely into the service of the Company, and various reforms were passed affecting education the liberty of the Press finance and justice The new charter of the East India Company in 1833 abolished the remaining monopoly of Chinese trade introduced reforms in the constitution of the Indian Government made the North West Provinces a separate administration, and abolished the restrictions on the residence of British subjects in India. The resolution of Lord Auckland (1835-42) to support Shah Shuja against Dost Muhammad brought on the first Afghan War (1839-42) and the serious disaster attendant on the fatal retreat from Cabul. The administration of Lord Ellenborough (1842-44) saw the conquest of Sind by Sir Charles Napier and its annexation (1843). Lord Hardinge (1844-48) conducted in person the first Sikh War and fought a series of severely contested battles ending with Sobraon (1846).

Lord Dalhousie's administration (1848-56) was fruitful in events. The Second Sikh War resulted after severe fighting in the submission of the Sikhs and the annexation of the Punjab (1849). The second Burmese War (1852) deprived the King of Burma of Pegu. Lord Dalhousie promoted the introduction of railways and the telegraph. He established cheap postage, promoted steam navigation with England viâ the Red Sea and opened the Ganges Canal. His annexation policy was much criticised at home. It proceeded on the principle that British being preferable to Indian rule gross misrule or a break in the natural succession justified in the interest of the subject populations, the transfer of a native State to the British Government. In 1849 this doctrine of lapse was applied to Satara and in 1853 Jhansi similarly became British territory, while on the death of the last of the Mahratta Princes of Nagpur his territory was annexed and became the Central Provinces in 1853. In 1856 after repeated warnings to the tyrannical rulers of Oudh that kingdom was also annexed without bloodshed or fighting.

Earl Canning (1857-62) who succeeded Lord Dalhousie left England pledged to pursue a policy of peace but he was destined to face the greatest crisis that has threatened British rule in India. A mutiny of sepoys broke out on the 10th May 1857 at Meerut and spread through the whole Bengal Army. Delhi was for some months in the possession of the rebels and many chiefs joined the revolt. The siege of Delhi, the massacre at Cawnpore, the relief of Lucknow and the Central India campaign stand out among the stirring events of that momentous time. Although the control of Indian affairs was vested in the Cabinet through the Board of Control, the great mutiny was laid to the charge of the East India Company, whose eventful annals were brought to a close by the transfer of the entire administration of India to the Crown.

INDIA UNDER THE CROWN.—The Act for the Better Government of India established the authority of the Crown and a Proclamation to the Princes, Chiefs, and People of India, dated the 1st Nov. 1858, announced the resolution of Her Majesty to assume the government of the territories in India heretofore administered in trust by the Honourable East India Company. Legislative Councils were established. Lord Canning was succeeded in 1862 by Lord Elgin, who, however died in Nov., 1863.

Sir John (Lord) Lawrence (1861-69) reformed the finances, which had been seriously burdened by the heavy military expenditure necessitated by the Mutiny. His administration was marked by the Bhutan War (1864) and by the terrible Orissa famine of 1866. He encouraged irrigation.

Lord Mayo (1869-72) effected many administrative reforms, instituted State railways, promoted the construction of roads and canals, and inaugurated the system of provincial finance, which has since been extended.

During the tenure of office of Lord Northbrook (1872-76) the late King Edward VII. then Prince of Wales visited India. The Viceroy devoted attention to finance and to famine relief. In 1875 the reigning Gaekwar of Baroda was deposed for misrule and disloyalty.

Lord Lytton's administration (1876-80) was made eventful by a terrible famine in Southern India and by the Second Afghan War. In 1877 the Queen assumed the title of EMPRESS OF INDIA.

The peaceful term of the Marquess of Ripon (1880-84) was marked by the extension of local self-government and by fiscal, judicial, educational and other reforms.

His successor was the Marquess of Dufferin (1884-88). In 1885-6 occurred the Third Burmese War by which Upper Burma with the Shan States was annexed. The N.W. frontier of Afghanistan was delimited, the frontier of India strengthened, and the army increased. The first Indian National Congress met in 1885.

The Marquess of Lansdowne (1888-94) continued his predecessor's policy of strengthening the army and consolidating British influence on the frontier. The Indo-Afghan boundary was defined and a serious outbreak in Manipur was suppressed. He took the first step in currency reform by closing the Indian mints to the free coinage of silver. He reconstituted the Legislative Councils in 1892 by introducing a more popular element and conferring a limited right of interpellation and criticism in financial matters.

The viceroyalty of Lord Elgin (1894-99) was full of events. In 1895 an outbreak in Chitral made necessary a large military expedition to relieve the garrison. Plague broke out in 1896, and has raged more or less severely ever since. In 1896-7 an area of 307 000 sq. ms. with a population of 70 millions was visited by a grievous famine. In 1897 the border tribes from Chitral to Baluchistan rose against the British garrisons. In the Tirah campaign that followed over 40 000 troops were employed. Several boundaries were settled under Lord Elgin, notably those with Russia on the Pamirs and with France on the Mekong. The frontiers of Afghanistan, Persia and China were also defined. The general Customs tariff, abolished in 1882, was reimposed in 1894.

Lord Curzon (1899-1904 and 1904-5) succeeded Lord Elgin. In 1899 the pound sterling was made legal tender in India concurrently with the rupee at the exchange of Rs. 15 to £1. In 1899-1900 occurred one of the worst famines on record, the tracts affected covering 475 000 sq. ms. with a population of 60 millions. Lord Curzon's term of office was a period of reform and reconstruction. He appointed Commissions of Inquiry on irrigation, railways, universities, agricultural banks, excise and police, all of which suggested important reforms. He instituted agricultural banks and departments, and initiated legislation to free the cultivators from the money-lenders. The famine codes were amended. A new province, under the direct control of the Governor-General in Council, was created, called the North-West Frontier Province (1901). The Aden and the Persio-Afghan boundaries were delimited. An Imperial Cadet Corps of native princes and nobles was inaugurated. Educational policy was reviewed and reforms introduced. A much needed reform of the police was undertaken. Lord Curzon also secured a perpetual lease of Berar from the Nizam. In 1904 a mission with a military escort proceeded to Tibet and secured a favourable treaty During Lord Curzon's absence in England for a few months in 1904 Lord Ampthill occupied the post of Viceroy Lord Curzon was reappointed in Dec., 1904. In 1905 the treaty with Afghanistan was renewed. The Viceroy reduced the dimensions of Bengal, and constituted a new province, called Eastern Bengal and Assam, by combining parts of Bengal with Assam. He carried out great reforms in the Army in conjunction with Lord Kitchener (appointed Comm.-under in Chief in 1902), but, differing from certain proposals made by the latter, and finding that he lacked the support of the Home Government, he resigned (Aug., 1905).

Lord Minto succeeded in Nov., 1905. The Prince of Wales (now H.M. King George) made a tour in India during the winter of 1905-6. For some years after 1905 there was agitation among Bengalis owing to the partition of Bengal, and a Seditious Meetings Act was passed in Nov., 1907. In his Budget speech in 1907 the Secretary of State, Viscount Morley, foreshadowed important reforms in Indian administration, designed to associate the people more closely with the Government. He nominated two Indian members to his own Council and an Indian member to the Governor-General's Council. He appointed Commissions to inquire into railways, into the possibilities of financial and administrative decentralisation, and into the conditions of factory labour, and action was taken on their reports. In 1908 the unrest in Bengal assumed an anarchical character. To mark the fiftieth anniversary of the transfer of India to the Crown a royal proclamation was issued in Nov., 1908 promising extended self-government. Owing to the continued unrest in 1909 and 1910, a Press Act, to control printing presses, was passed.

Lord Hardinge succeeded in Nov., 1910. The Indian Legislative Council in June, 1911, prohibited indentured emigration from India to Natal after 1 July, 1912, and a new Seditious Meetings Act was passed. A great Durbar was held at Delhi on 12 December, 1911, by H.M. King George, to announce his Coronation. On this occasion the King Emperor also made announcements of new and far-reaching steps in Indian policy, viz., the transfer of the seat of Government from Calcutta to Delhi, and the creation of a Governorship for the presidency of Bengal, of a Lieut.-Governorship for Bihar, Chota Nagpur, and Orissa, and of a Chief Commissionership for Assam. Delhi was chosen as the capital on geographical, historical, and political grounds. The provincial changes involved a partial rescission of the partition of Bengal and the abolition of the province of Eastern Bengal and Assam, created in 1905. Bengal as reconstituted is a compact Bengali-speaking province, placed under a Governor in Council. A new province, Bihar and Orissa, was formed, including Chota Nagpur and the Sambalpur district. Assam again became a separate province, under a Chief Commissioner. The reconstituted provinces came into existence on 1 April, 1912. In pursuance of recommendations by the Decentralisation Commission, enhanced powers in respect of appointments and expenditure were granted to local governments having a quasi-permanent provincial settlement. Moreover, greater permanency was arranged for in financial settlements with the provinces, the control of the Government of India being relaxed. In Dec., 1912, the Viceroy took formal possession of the new headquarters at Delhi. The State entry was marred by an attempt on the life of the Viceroy. The outbreak of The Great War in August, 1914, was the signal for an outburst of loyalty and devotion to the King-Emperor on the part of the princes and peoples of India. Practically all the ruling chiefs placed their military forces and the resources of their states at the disposal of the Government.

Following on the outbreak of war serious disturbances were started in the Punjab and elsewhere by emigrants returning from Canada and the United States imbued with revolutionary ideas. Order was restored as a result of measures taken under the Defence of India Act, which was passed in March, 1915. Lord Hardinge's term of office as Viceroy was extended from November, 1915, to March, 1916. The Viceroy announced in March, 1916, that it had been decided eventually to abolish the system of indentured emigration from India. Lord Hardinge put forward proposals for post-war constitutional reforms.

Lord Chelmsford succeeded in April, 1916. The year 1917 was marked by certain symptoms of unrest and the development of an agitation for constitutional changes towards self-government, or, in its extreme form, "Home Rule for India."

The Public Services Commission, appointed during Lord Hardinge's administration, reported.

Towards the end of 1917 the Secretary of State visited India in connexion with a development of constitutional progress. The Bombay Government took the first steps towards obligatory primary education, a policy of more complete local self-government was decided on by the Government of India. The influenza epidemic spread to India, and it was estimated that over 12 million deaths in British India and Indian States resulted. The Industrial Commission, appointed in 1916, issued a report. In 1919 a bill was introduced into Parliament embodying the proposals of the "Montagu-Chelmsford Joint Report," and eventually passed. During the year considerable distress occurred in consequence of the partial failure of the 1918 autumn crops throughout Northern India and the Peninsula, and relief measures were undertaken. Serious disturbances in the Punjab and Delhi, resulting in many deaths, followed on a "passive resistance" movement, inaugurated by Mr. Gandhi against the "Rowlatt" Bills, introduced by the Government of India, on the recommendation of the "Rowlatt" Committee, for renewing some of the powers with which the Government had armed themselves during the War to deal with sedition. The murder of the Amir and the subsequent events in Afghanistan were followed by an inroad of Afghans and some frontier tribes into India, necessitating prompt military action by the Government of India. The "Sadler" Commission on the Calcutta University reported during the year, and made drastic proposals for recasting the Indian secondary and university educational system. The Home Parliament, by rules, laid down the details of the constitution of the new Central and Provincial Governments (see pp. 735-737). The Amir's representatives visited India and discussed with officers of the Indian Government the possibility of a resumption of more friendly relations. Fighting with the Mahsuds on the North-West frontier continued throughout the year, in consequence of which the Viceroy announced Government's intention to occupy Central Waziristan, and to continue the railway from Jamrud towards the Khyber Further steps towards employing more largely Indians in the various Government services and for the improvement of conditions of service and pay of both European and Indian members of the same were taken The recommendation of the Exchange and Currency Committee for the linking of the rupee to gold and the adoption of an exchange rate equivalent to one tenth of the gold contents of the sovereign i.e., an exchange rate of Rs 10 to the £ was adopted A High Commissioner for India in London with a separate establishment responsible to the Government of India for certain agency work previously performed by the India Office was appointed The Army in India and the Medical Services Committees respectively reported The Army in India Committee attempted to determine the part to be played by the Army in India in a scheme of Imperial Defence and to analyse the steps which must be taken to make the Army, both in its administration and its personnel, more efficient and more attractive to the right type of soldiers

In January 1921 the new Indian Legislature, Provincial Councils and the Chamber of Princes were inaugurated by the Duke of Connaught

Lord Reading succeeded in April 1921 The battle between constitutionalism and revolution continued A conflict between Sikhs at Nankana resulted in many deaths Mr Gandhi the Ali brothers and their associates continued to advocate non co operation with the Government and boycott of the reforms The utterances of the Ali brothers forced Government to order their arrest The Moplahs (Muhammadan fanatics of Malabar) resisted the ordinary processes of law and a widespread outbreak of violence ensued which forced the authorities to take strong military measures for its suppression Frontier disturbances and fighting continued Failure of the crops in some parts necessitated the opening of relief works Special missions were sent to Afghanistan and Tibet The Railway Committee reported and recommended drastic changes, including the termination of the system of management of railways by Government companies domiciled in England

In November the Prince of Wales visited India In 1922 the Government arrested Mr Gandhi, who was sentenced to six years imprisonment The Government found it necessary to give to Ruling Princes some measure of protection against attacks in the Press

The Fiscal Commission (appointed in 1921) reported and advised the adoption of a policy of protection

The Hon V Srinivasa Sastri visited the Dominions as a representative of the Government of India, to discuss with the leaders of political thought the disabilities of Indians in the self governing Dominions Twenty three Acts and Regulations supplementing the criminal law were repealed A Central Advisory Board for Railways was established

In 1923 Burma was constituted a Governor's Province The "Inchcape Retrenchment Committee, appointed in 1922, reported and recommended a total reduction in the Budget of Rs 19¼ crores The Government accepted the principle of Protection, but declared that it should be applied with discrimination, hitherto the Indian tariff had been a revenue tariff A trade Convention was concluded with Afghanistan A Bill was passed providing for the removal of existing racial distinctions in the criminal procedure applicable to Indians and non Indians The new frontier policy was further developed by the completion of various roads for mechanical transport within Waziristan and along the Derajat border At the Imperial Conference, a Resolution was passed recommending each Dominion of the Empire concerned to set up a Commission to consider, in conjunction with a Commission of equal number from India, how far the principle laid down by the Imperial Conference of 1921, that Indians lawfully resident overseas should not suffer derogation of rights of citizenship, had been given effect to and to what extent it could be further applied The Bengal Government was given special powers to deal with violent crime The Punjab was greatly disturbed by the Sikh invasion of the Nabha State The Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services, appointed in 1923 reported and recommended financial improvements for the Indian Civil and other Services Further Indianisation of the Services was recommended During the year a Legislative Council was set up in Coorg

Early in 1925 the Swarajist leader Mr Das repudiated the policy of violence but asked in return for the cessation of repressive measures A committee was appointed to enquire into the difficulties arising from or inherent in the working of the Constitution and recommended many alterations particularly that the control of the Secretary of State should be relaxed in purely Indian matters The terms of reference did not, however extend to the larger question of a complete revision of the Constitution, contemplated in the Montagu Chelmsford scheme of 1918 The Viceroy came home to confer with the Home Government, and on his return to India announced the decision that the moment for such an enquiry had not arrived The Government extended the policy of protection by granting a bounty on steel manufactured in India The Khyber Pass Railway, 27 miles in length from Jamrud—some three miles from the entrance of the Pass—to Landi Kotal, on the Afghan border, was opened

In 1926 the Cotton Excise duty was abolished It was decided to reconstruct the Royal Indian Marine as a combatant force so that India may ultimately undertake her own naval defence The Government of India decided to prohibit the export of opium for medical purposes, thus taking the lead in initiating the measures for which the Geneva Protocol provides

Lord Irwin succeeded Lord Reading as Viceroy in April, 1926

In the United Provinces a Bill was passed to improve the lot of tenants in Agra Province by facilitating occupancy tenure and for the prevention of unauthorised imposts by landlords

The Royal Commission on Indian Currency and Finance recommended that the gold value of the rupee should be fixed at 1*s* 6*d*, that the currency authority should be put under a statutory obligation to buy and sell gold or gold exchange at appropriate prices to maintain the ratio, that a central bank should be created apart from the Imperial Bank and that measures should be taken to establish a gold standard for India Government announced their intention to adopt the ratio of 1*s* 6*d* and to pass the necessary legislation to put the matter on a statutory basis.

Following the success of the Government mission for the suppression of slave trading in the Hukawng valley an expedition was sent to the Kachin tribal chiefs in Burma with the object of endeavouring to persuade the chiefs to agree to the abolition of the system of tribal slavery in the area lying between the head waters of the Irrawaddy. In Nepal the slave liberation scheme formulated by the Prime Minister of that State, was completed at a cost of £275,000.

Important changes in the administration of the State of Hyderabad were made by H.H. the Nizam following representations by the Supreme Government.

During the year there was a recrudescence of communal and religious strife between Moslems and Hindus and serious riots, with great loss of lives occurred in most parts of India particularly in Kohat, Calcutta and Delhi. The Government of Bengal was obliged to proclaim a state of emergency.

The elections for the Indian Assembly and Provincial Councils were held towards the close of the year.

In 1927 a continuance of the measures for the protection of the Indian steel industry in a modified form was recommended by the Indian Tariff Board, whose main proposals were accepted by the Government of India. It was also decided to protect the cotton textile industry against competition in cotton yarn produced under conditions which enable such yarn to be produced at a cost below that at which it can be produced in India, by an alteration in the import duty on cotton yarn, and to abolish the duty on imported mill stores etc. An Act for the registration of trade unions came into force. The rupee was stabilised by legislation, at 1*s* 6*d*., and a bill for the establishment of an Indian Reserve Bank was introduced. The Bombay Back Bay Reclamation Committee recommended the carrying on of a certain portion of the work, but that it should in future, as far as possible, be undertaken by contract agency.

A substantial and progressive Indianisation of the Indian Army was recommended by the Sandhurst (Skeen) Committee in order that, by 1952 50 per cent. of the cadre of officers should be Indians.

A settlement was reached with the Government of South Africa on the question of the position of Indians in the Union. A Public Services Commission was formally constituted. The new Council House at New Delhi was opened. The Indian Princes met in conference to consider their future status. His Highness, the Maharajah of Patiala sanctioned a scheme of compulsory education in his State. Slavery was abolished in the State of Kalat (Baluchistan).

In the Home Parliament the Indian Navy Bill and the Indian Church Bill were passed. The latter provides that the Church in India shall be an autonomous body.

In November the Home Government announced its intention to set up a Statutory Commission, with the Rt. Hon. Sir John Simon as Chairman, to report to what extent it is desirable to establish the principles of responsible government in India, or to extend, modify or restrict the degree of responsible government.

In 1928 the Commission visited India, but was unfavourably received by many who were dissatisfied with the terms of reference. Boycotts and sympathetic strikes were organised. Towards the end of the year the Commission succeeded in securing the offer of the co-operation of most of the political parties and groups previously hostile. A Committee was appointed, with Sir Harcourt Butler as Chairman to consider the relations between the Paramount Power and the Indian States with special reference to the financial and economic relations between British India and the States.

The Royal Commission on Agriculture in India (appointed in 1926) issued its Report and the first step to carry out its recommendations was taken by the opening of a Conference in Delhi to draw up schemes for co-ordinated action.

In 1927 it was announced that in future, the number of direct vacancies open to Indian candidates at Sandhurst will be doubled, that a certain number of vacancies will be reserved for Indian officers holding the Viceroy's commission, and that Woolwich and Cranwell will be open to Indian aspirants for King's Commissions.

In 1929 power was given by the Appellate Jurisdiction Act to appoint Indian judges, etc., as additional members of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council for the hearing of appeals from India. The Statutory Commission continued its labours but met with a considerable amount of opposition organised by some of the political groups in India. Indian leaders attempted (but with little success) to draw up proposals acceptable to the main reconised political parties for submission to the Commission. A bill was introduced in the Assembly providing for the removal from India of non-Indian communist agents and a few days later an attempt was made by communists to destroy members of the Assembly by throwing bombs at the Government benches. The Bill was passed later as an Ordinance owing to the refusal of the President of the Assembly to allow its discussion on the ground that some of its provisions were sub judice in view of a trial of some conspirators then proceeding. There was considerable unrest in parts of India during the year, particularly in Bombay. An Act was passed providing for the investigation and settlement of trade disputes under it strikes and lock-outs in utility services are penalised, strikes and lock-outs having any object than the furtherance of a trade dispute within the trade or industry in which the strikers or employers are engaged, or are designed to inflict severe general and prolonged hardship upon the community and government are illegal.

A Royal Commission was appointed to report on the existing conditions of labour in industrial undertakings in British India, on the health, efficiency and standard of living of the workers, and on the relations between employers and employed. A Committee was also appointed to consider the general problem of road development.

An Act was passed providing that the age of marriage shall not be less than 14 and the age of consent not less than 16.

The Indian States Committee presented its Report. It recommended that the Viceroy, not the Governor-General in Council, should in future be the Agent of the Crown and that important matters of dispute between the states themselves, between the states and the Paramount Power and between the states and British India should be referred to independent Committees for advice. The Committee dealt with the relationship between the Paramount

Power and the financial relations between British India and the states, particularly the claim of the states for a share in the maritime customs the proceeds of which are enjoyed at present exclusively by British India

In view of the impending issue of the Report of the Statutory Commission it was decided to extend the term of the Central and Provincial legislatures thus postponing the elections beyond the end of the year

In 1930 the outstanding event was the issue of the Report of the Statutory Commission (the Simon Commission). The report was unanimous. A survey of the facts containing an analysis of the trend of political thought in India was first published (Cmd 3568) then after a short interval the Commission's recommendations (Cmd 3569). These though in no sense revolutionary foreshadowed many changes. First the separation of Burma whose political association with India is not based on any natural or racial affinity but is a mere accident of history and, secondly a number of radical reforms in the constitution of India proper. Briefly these may be summarised as the grant of the greatest possible measure of independence to local Governments within their own sphere and the substitution of a Federal system in place of the existing arrangements. Measures were also proposed whereby representatives of the Indian States will join with representatives of British India for the discussion of matters of common concern in a Council of Greater India to be appointed not by Statute but by Royal Proclamation.

A notable feature of the Statutory Commission's scheme was its insistence on the principle that the constitution to be framed should be such as will not require to be revised and overhauled by external authority at stated intervals but should contain within itself provision for adaptation by a process of natural growth to meet new circumstances and changing conditions thus avoiding the unsettlement caused by periodic enquiries. The ideal of a Federation for All India was held up as one to be attained by degrees as the Feudatory States come to realise the desirability of entering into closer political relations with British India, and the reconstruction of the constitution of British India on a federal basis was advocated as an essential preparatory step towards that ultimate objective.

It was proposed that the Provinces should be provided with enlarged financial resources. Their Governments would no longer be "dyarchic," as under the Montagu-Chelmsford Constitution but unitary every Member being required to accept joint responsibility for all acts of the Administration. Ministers whether chosen from the local Legislature or not were to be nominated by the Governor, and would have charge of those branches of the administration which are now 'reserved' to the Official Side of the Government, e.g. control of the Police and maintenance of Law and Order. The Commission recommended that reserve powers should be vested in the Governor for such essential purposes as the protection of minorities and of the rights of the Services, and the carrying on of the Government in any emergency such as the breakdown for any reason of the normal arrangements, that Legislatures should be enlarged the franchise basis widened, and constituencies reduced to more manageable size. Moreover, a certain inelasticity was recognised as indispensable, and measures were indicated whereby each Province may advance towards self-government on the lines found best suited to its individual needs provided always that the rights of minorities were not invaded by any constitutional changes thus effected.

Other recommendations were that in the Central Government the 'Legislative Assembly' should become the "Federal Assembly" the Council of State or Upper House to continue with its existing functions and constituent elements.

The Commission suggested that it may be desirable to treat the defence of India as a matter falling within the responsibility of the Governor General (advised by the Commander-in-Chief as at present) as representative of the Imperial Authorities instead of as a function of the Governor General in (Executive) Council in association with the Indian Legislature. The possibility that this suggestion might be held to derogate from the prestige of the Indian Government was recognised the Commission made it only because on any other basis they regarded the military problem as an almost insuperable obstacle to the carrying out of the policy laid down in 1919 of the progressive realisation of responsible government. It was submitted that so long as British troops are required for the defence of the Indian frontier the British Parliament cannot surrender to any subordinate or independent authority effective control in this sphere.

The Commission's Report published in June was received with a storm of disapprobation in Indian political circles and was the signal for a recrudescence of the non-co-operation movement in an acute form. There were serious riots and bomb outrages in various parts of India. In the course of the measures taken to restore order Mr. Gandhi and numerous other political leaders were brought to trial convicted, and sentenced to terms of imprisonment.

In September the Round Table Conference was convened in London as the next stage in the process of settling the future constitution.

On the North West Frontier there were repercussions of the unrest in India itself repeated raids by tribesmen necessitated defensive and retaliatory measures, particularly by the Royal Air Force.

General elections to the Indian and Provincial Legislatures took place in the autumn.

In 1931 the various Committees of the Round Table Conference presented their Reports, one of the most important being that of the Federal Relations Sub-Committee outlining the constitution of a Federal Government of India. The representatives of the Indian States had expressed their willingness to consider their entry into a Federal system. The Conference adjourned in January. Later, there was considerable disorder in India, but eventually negotiations resulted in an agreement for the cessation of civil disobedience and of the boycott of English goods.

New Delhi was inaugurated in February. The Earl of Willingdon succeeded Lord Irwin as Viceroy in April.

The Royal Commission ("Whitley") on Labour, appointed in 1929, submitted their Report and recommendations.

The Round Table Conference re-assembled in London in October, and discussed the composition and functions of the proposed Federal Legislature, the Federal Court, the representation of minorities, the States' places in the Legislature, &c.

At the conclusion of the Session of the Conference in December the Prime Minister stated, that in view of the differences of opinion revealed during the discussions the Government proposed to appoint three Committees to work in India to investigate more fully the questions of franchise federal finance, and relations with certain Indian States.

In 1932 measures were taken to counteract the civil disobedience movement and Mr Gandhi who attended the Conference, was arrested on his return to India. The various communities having failed to agree in regard to their representation in the Provincial Legislatures the Home Government decided on certain provisions to give effect to a scheme for the representation of the communities, to be laid before Parliament in due course. Later, it was announced that another (small) Round Table Conference would be convened in November, with a view to reach an agreement consistent with the declared policy of His Majesty's Government on the important constitutional questions still remaining to be decided. The North West Frontier Province was constituted as Governor's Province, an annual subvention of Rs 1 crore (£750,000) being granted by the Central Government, to be operative for three years or until the new constitution of India is inaugurated whichever is earlier. An initial balance of Rs 10 lakhs (£75 000) was placed at the disposition of the Province. Aden was constituted a Province, under a Chief Commissioner under the direct control of the Government of India.

IMPERIAL LEGISLATION.—Legislation for India in England is chiefly of a constitutional or financial character. The Regulating Act (1773) which created the first Governor General, a Council of five members, and a supreme court with a chief judge, was the first statute that recognised the East India Company as a ruling body. Pitt's India Act (1784) left the business and most of the patronage to the Court of Directors but gave the supreme civil and military authority to a Board of Control whose president represented India in the House of Commons. In 1793 the Company's charter was renewed, in 1813, on a further renewal of the charter the trade of India was thrown open, while on the next renewal in 1833 the Company's monopoly of the China trade was abolished and they became a non-commercial governing body. In 1853 the Company's charter was renewed for the last time and the Indian Civil Service was thrown open to competition. By 'An Act for the Better Government of India (1858) all the territories governed by the East India Company were transferred to the Crown and all the powers exercised by the Company and the Board of Control were vested in the Secretary of State for India, assisted by a Council. Under this Act as amended by Acts of 1889, 1907, 1915 and 1919, at least one half of the members of Council must have served in India for 10 years, and must not have left India more than 5 years prior to their appointment. The number of members may be 12 and must not be less than 8, and is at present 9. Their term of office is now 5 years with power of extension. There are now 3 Indian members. In 1877 (under the Royal Titles Act) Queen Victoria assumed the title of Empress of India. By the Indian Councils Act (1909) the imperial and provincial Legislative Councils were enlarged, their powers of interpellation and criticism enhanced and the elective element extended, special provision being made for the representation of landholders, the professional classes, Muhammadans and European and Indian commerce. Madras and Bombay were increased in size and power was given to constitute executive councils in provinces under Lieut.-Governors. The Government of India Act (1912) created a Governor of Bengal established an Executive Council for Bihar and Orissa, and authorised the creation of legislative councils in provinces under Chief Commissioners. The Indian High Courts Act (1911) empowered the Government of India to increase the number of High Court judges from 15 to 20 to establish new High Courts and to appoint temporary judges. An Act to consolidate the Imperial Legislation relating to the Government of India was passed in 1915. The Government of India Act 1919 confers on provinces a larger measure of independence of the Government of India. It distinguishes the functions of local governments and local legislatures from the functions of the Governor General in Council and the Indian Legislature. It provides for the devolution of authority in respect of provincial subjects to local governments, for the allocation of revenues to those governments, and for the use under the authority of the Governor General in Council of the agency of local governments in relation to central subjects. It provides for the transfer of some provincial subjects to the administration of the Governor acting with Ministers. It gives borrowing powers to local governments. It lays down that the major provinces shall be governed in relation to reserved subjects by a Governor in Council, and in relation to transferred subjects by a Governor acting with Ministers, appointed from among the elected Members of the local legislative Council. It confers extended powers on local legislatures. For the Supreme or Central Government, it provides that the Legislature shall consist of the Governor General and two Chambers, viz. the Council of State and the Legislative Assembly. It provides for the appointment of an Auditor General and a Public Services Commission on India.

By the Government of India Act, 1929, His Majesty may by Order in Council transfer the control of the military government of Aden to such person or authority as may be specified in the Order.

INDIAN LAW.—The law administered in the Indian courts consists mainly of (1) the enactments of the Indian Legislative Councils (imperial and provincial) and of the bodies that preceded them (2) statutes of the British Parliament applicable to India (3) the Hindu and Muhammadan laws of inheritance and domestic law, (4) the customary law affecting particular castes and races.

The Government of India.

EMPEROR OF INDIA—H I M GEORGE V.

Secretary of State—The Right Hon Sir Samuel Hoare, Bt, G B E, C M G, M P.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA is the head of the Indian Administration in England, and as a member of the Cabinet he is solely responsible to and represents the supreme authority of Parliament Subject to the provisions of the Government of India Act and rules made thereunder the Secretary of State can impose his orders on the Government of India In matters requiring secrecy (e g, foreign policy and the affairs of Indian States) the Secretary of State can act on his own authority without consulting his Council and in most other matters can overrule the majority of his Council Indian Government business in England is transacted at the India Office and at the office of the High Commissioner for India (see p 300)

The King Emperor appoints the Governor-General, the Governors of the 10 major Provinces (Bengal, Madras Bombay the United Provinces, Bihar and Orissa the Punjab, the Central Provinces Assam, Burma and the North West Frontier Province) the Commander in Chief, the Members of the Executive Councils of the Governor General and of Governors, and the Judges of the High Courts The term of these appointments, except judgeships, is usually 5 years

Subject to the Secretary of State's direction the supreme executive authority in India, in both civil and military affairs is the Governor General in Council The Governor General's Executive Council now contains 7 members including the Commander in Chief (three of whom must have served in India 10 years), as well as himself Ordinarily the opinion of the majority prevails but the Governor General is empowered in special circumstances to overrule the majority In accordance with the Government of India Act, 1919, and rules thereunder, the Indian Legislature consists of the Governor General and two Chambers, viz the Council of State and the Legislative Assembly (see pp 735, 737 as to their constitution) Except as otherwise provided by or under the Act, a Bill is not deemed to have been passed unless agreed to by both Chambers The Act confers powers on the Governor General of securing essential legislation in emergencies, subject to disallowance by His Majesty in Council, of returning Bills for reconsideration, and of vetoing proposed legislation affecting the safety or tranquillity of British India The Indian Budget is submitted to both Chambers, and is voted on by the Legislative Assembly except in regard to certain specified heads, but the Governor General in Council can act, notwithstanding a refusal or reduction of grants, where essential to the discharge of his responsibilities, and he may authorise expenditure necessary for the safety and tranquillity of British India or any part thereof Differences of opinion between the two Chambers may be referred for decision by the Governor General to a joint meeting of members of both Chambers appointed for the purpose Although the Government does not command a majority in the Indian Legislature, it is necessarily given the power to reject adverse votes since its responsibility is not to the Indian Legislature, but to Parliament

The seat of the Supreme Government is at Delhi the summer headquarters being still at Simla.

Business is conducted by 9 Departments—Finance, Foreign and Political Home, Legislative, Commerce, Industries and Labour Education Health and Lands Army, and Railway Each Department is in the charge of a Secretary to Government (the Foreign and Political Department has both a Foreign and a Political Secretary) and is under the care of a member of the Viceroy's Executive Council, who has authority to deal with affairs of minor importance and to select what is worthy of the consideration of the Governor General and his Council The Governor General himself superintends the Foreign and Political Department. The Finance Department deals with public accounts, loans, taxation, opium currency, banking, mints, &c The Foreign and Political Department conducts relations with external politics, relations with Foreign States frontier tribes, relations with Indian States and feudatories within the limits of India, and, through its Political Residents and Agents in the various Indian States supervises their administration and regulates their relations with the paramount Power The Political Residents in the Persian Gulf and Muscat look after the commercial and political interests of India in those quarters The Home Department deals with the internal politics civil service judicial affairs prisons police &c The Legal Member of Council takes charge of Government Bills in connexion with the Legislative Department The department of Commerce deals with trade and shipping ports, &c The department of Industries and Labour deals with industries stores, labour, public works, post office, telegraphs, civil aviation communications, irrigation, factories, &c The Army is under the Army Department, of which the Commander in Chief has charge in Council The Education, Health and Lands Department has the control of education, local government sanitation, land revenue and surveys agriculture, famine, meteorology, forests, foodstuffs, &c Railway administration is entrusted to a Railway Department, which is in the charge of the Commerce Member of Council

British India is divided into 16 Local Governments and Administrations, viz —Under Governors, Madras, Bombay, and Bengal, still termed Presidencies, the United Provinces the Punjab, Bihar and Orissa, the Central Provinces, Assam, Burma and the North West Frontier Province under Chief Commissioners, who are under the immediate authority of the Governor General in Council, British Baluchistan, Delhi, Ajmer-Merwara, Coorg, the Andaman and Nicobar Islands and Aden

The Governors of Madras, Bombay and Bengal are permitted to communicate direct with the Secretary of State

The unit of administration throughout British India is the District, the executive head of which is the District Officer, called Collector Magistrate or Deputy Commissioner, as the case may be. In subordination to a Commissioner, who corresponds direct with the Provincial Government, he has control in every department of administration, and is the responsible head of his jurisdiction. There are 273 Districts in British India.

There are separate High Courts for both civil and criminal cases in Madras, Bengal, Bombay, Bihar and Orissa, and in the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, the Punjab and Burma, and a Chief Court in Oudh. Appeals may be carried to the English Privy Council. The Central Provinces and Berar, Coorg, Sind, the North-West Frontier Province and British Baluchistan have each a Judicial Commissioner's Court.

PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS AND ADMINISTRATIONS.*

Under the Government of India Act 1919, and rules made thereunder, the local governments are given a large measure of independence of the Supreme Government. The Act distinguishes the functions of local governments and local legislatures of the Provinces from the functions of the Governor General in Council and the Indian Legislature. The Supreme Government is given authority over certain subjects classified as Central such as defence political relations railways tariffs &c. Other administrative heads classified as Provincial—viz. local self government public health education public works water supply land revenue administration famine relief agriculture excise administration of justice &c., are wholly or partly handed over to Provincial Governments with responsibility subject to certain limitations within their own areas for administering them. In the ten major or 'Governors' Provinces—i.e. Madras Bengal Bombay the United Provinces Bihar and Orissa the Central Provinces the Punjab Assam Burma and the North West Frontier Province—provincial subjects are further divided into 'reserved' and 'transferred' subjects the administration of and responsibility for, which rests with the Governor and his Executive Council and with the Governor and Ministers respectively. Ministers are chosen from among the elected members of the Legislative Council by, and hold office during the pleasure of, the Governor. They are directly responsible to the Legislative Council for the administration of the 'transferred' subjects but can be overruled by the Governor if he considers their policy inconsistent with the discharge of his responsibilities.

The Act legislates for a transition from a bureaucratic to a self government system and for the gradual transfer of more subjects to the Ministers. Matters of departmental or minor importance are dealt with as a rule by the Governor his Council, and the Ministers sitting in conclave, but the decision on reserved subjects rests with the Governor in Council, and that on transferred subjects with the Ministers subject to the Governor's intervention and control.

Legislative Councils have an elected majority, and normally a life of three years, but may be sooner dissolved by the Governor. The previous sanction of the Governor General in Council is required to the introduction of certain classes of Provincial Bills. The Governor has powers of veto in regard to proposed legislation affecting the safety or tranquillity of his Province or any part of it or of another Province and can secure legislation essential to the discharge of his responsibilities for reserved subjects. Such Bills must be sent to the Governor General for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure but in emergencies the Governor General may assent to them subject to disallowance by His Majesty in Council. Governor has powers of assenting to, of withholding assent to or of returning for reconsideration other Bills, but must in certain circumstances send them for consideration to the Governor-General, who may reserve them for His Majesty's pleasure.

Provincial Budgets are voted on by the Legislative Council but the Governor has power to act, in respect of a demand for reserved subjects notwithstanding a refusal or a reduction of grants if the demand is essential to the discharge of his responsibilities for the subject, and in cases of emergency he can authorise such expenditure as may be necessary for the safety or tranquillity of his Province. Certain heads of expenditure do not require an annual vote and a deadlock is thus avoided in case of irresponsible action by the Legislative Council in the matter of supply.

Of the members nominated to the Indian Legislature and Provincial Legislative Councils some represent certain communities and interests. Males over 21 (18 in the case of Burma) years of age possessing certain qualifications (residence within the constituency and the possession of certain property qualifications, the payment of land revenue, rent, local taxes, income tax or municipal rates) are eligible for the franchise. Women are not qualified for registration but the disqualification may be removed in certain circumstances in any Province or in all. The franchise is low and gives the vote to small cultivators and some wage earners. The electorate of the fourth general election comprises over 8,744,802 persons, of which nearly 398,000 are women.

(1) MADRAS (area 142,260 sq. miles; pop. 46,740,107) was not only the oldest but the most important of the three original Presidencies before Clive's conquest of Bengal, though it was small in extent until the annexation of the Carnatic in 1801. With a coast-line of 1,730 miles the province has no good natural harbour but an artificial harbour has been constructed at Madras at great expense. The province is not naturally fertile, though irrigation systems in the river deltas have enormously increased the produce of the soil and have yielded a large profit to the State. Rice, millet and other food grains, oilseeds, cotton, indigo, spices, tobacco, tea, &c. are cultivated. Manganese ore is mined and exported. Madras is served by the South Indian and by the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railways, the latter connecting it with Bengal on the north and Bombay on the west. About 89 per cent. of the people are Hindus. There are 1,774,226 native Christians, mainly Roman Catholics. Many natives of the Presidency emigrate to Burma and Ceylon, some only temporarily. The languages principally spoken are Tamil, Telugu and Malayalam. Madura (182,078) and Trichinopoly (142,843), famous for their Hindu temples, are the chief cities after the capital.

(2) BOMBAY.—The Island of BOMBAY was part of the dowry of the Infanta of Portugal (1662) and was made over by Charles II. to the East India Company in 1668. The greater part of the present territory was obtained by annexations from the Mahrattas and by the lapse of the Satara State. Sind was conquered in 1843. The province (including Sind) contains 123,541 square miles (about equal in size to the British Isles) with a population of 21,879,123. Eastern Sind is desert. The administration of Sind (which occupies about two-fifths of the Presidency) is in some respects separate. About 76 per cent. of the people of the Presidency are Hindus and 20 per cent. Muhammadans. The Parsis (89,543), who are very prominent in trade, are mainly found in Bombay. Marathi, Gujarati, Sindhi, Kanarese and Western Hindi, are the principal languages. Millet and other food-grains and oil seeds are cultivated. Cotton is largely produced for export and for manufacture in the constantly extending cotton-mills of Bombay and Ahmedabad. The chief railway systems are the Bombay, Baroda and Central India with the lines worked by it to the north, and the Great Indian Peninsula (with the Indian Midland) eastwards; south-eastwards is the Madras and Southern Mahratta system; while Karachi (Sind) is the port for the extensive North-Western Railway system. Ahmedabad (313,789), Poona (250,187), Sholapur (144,654), Surat and Karachi (263,565), the capital and chief port of Sind, are the most important cities.

(3) BENGAL (area of newly-constituted province, 76,843 sq. miles, with population of 50,114,002) was placed under a Lieutenant-Governor in 1854. The old Bengal Presidency included practically all Northern and Central India, but subsequently the province consisted of part of Bengal proper with Bihar, Orissa, and Chota-Nagpur. Fifteen districts of Eastern Bengal were detached in 1905 and combined with Assam, while one district from the Central Provinces was added to Bengal. This partition was revoked in 1911, and Bengal now includes five Bengali-speaking divisions. About 55 per cent. of the population are Muhammadans and 43 per cent. Hindus. The principal languages are Bengali and Western Hindi. For the most part the province is a great alluvial plain, very populous and productive. The chief products are rice, jute, oilseeds, sugar, tobacco, silk, tea, and coal. The East Indian Railway is the great artery of the Ganges Valley. The Eastern Bengal Railway, running north, and the Bengal-Nagpur, south, from Calcutta, are also important. Important cities are Dacca (138,518), now the second capital, and Howrah (224,873), a great jute-manufacturing centre adjoining Calcutta.

INDIAN APPOINTMENTS

THE higher civil administration of British India is recruited from four sources—1 Open competitive examination in England and India 2 The Indian Army 3 The patronage of the Secretary of State 4 The patronage of the Local Governments

The Civil Service of India—The annual examination ordinarily commences in London July–August Candidates must be over 21 and under 24 on Aug 1 in the year of examination Application for permission to compete must be made on or before June 1, on forms that can be obtained from the Secretary, Civil Service Commission London W 1 Examination fee £8 Selected candidates are on probation in England for one or two years, and receive an allowance of £270 if of European domicile, or £315 if of Indian domicile, if they pass their probation at one of the Universities or Colleges approved by the Secretary of State, conduct themselves well, and comply with all the rules laid down for their guidance A final examination is held in Indian law, language, &c A first class passage to India will be engaged for selected candidates In case of failure to pass the final examination or to execute the usual covenant and to proceed to India, all allowances received must be refunded The salary of a covenanted civil servant commences at Rs 7,200* a year The Regulations for competitive examinations to be held in India can be obtained from the India Office, London

The Indian Army—Copies of a pamphlet giving full information regarding conditions of service may be obtained, on application, from the Military Department of the India Office The following is a summary of the principal points Candidates for commissions in the Indian Army are required to pass the Army Entrance Examination held by the Civil Service Commissioners Candidates must be between 18 and 19 years of age (in the case of Indian candidates the age limits are 18 and 20 years) Of the cadetships for the Indian Army offered, some are allotted to King's India Cadets nominated by the Secretary of State for India, the remainder being offered to candidates in the order of their passing the entrance examination A few direct appointments to the Unattached List for the Indian Army are made by the War Office from candidates nominated by the principal Universities in the United Kingdom A few direct appointments are also offered to officers of the Territorial Army and Supplementary Reserve between the ages of 21 and 25 who undertake the final examination of the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, under arrangements made by the War Office. At the end of the period of training at Sandhurst, cadets recommended for commissions are gazetted to the Unattached List for the Indian Army On appointment to an Indian regiment, an officer's initial pay is at the present moment roughly Rs 480 (£36) per month Regulations and examination papers can be obtained from His Majesty's Stationery Office, Imperial House, Kingsway, W C

Indian Police Force (Higher Grade)—A competitive examination is usually held in London and other centres in June of each year in conjunction with the Army and Air Force Examination The standard of the competitive examination for admission to the Indian Police Service is such that competitors whose school education ended before they reached the age of 17 can have little prospect of qualifying for appointment A fee of £4 is required from candidates examined in London, and a fee of £5 from those examined in other centres Save as provided in the regulations a candidate must be a European British subject Indian and Burmese candidates are eligible if they have been resident in the United Kingdom for not less than five years Candidates must be above 19 and under 21 years of age on Aug 1 must be unmarried, and if they marry before reaching India must forfeit their appointments Applications to compete at the examination must be made on forms to be obtained from the India Office Whitehall, London Successful candidates are required to undergo a strict medical examination, are examined as to their ability to ride Free passage to India is granted to probationers Their initial pay is Rs 350 per month, plus an overseas pay of Rs 100 per month in the case of probationers with non Indian domicile The pay proceeds by annual increments to Rs 700, plus overseas pay of £30 a month, and thence to Rs 1,350 per month with overseas pay of the same amount, subject to efficiency bars, with prospects of promotion to higher posts *

The patronage of the Secretary of State for India is not extensive Appointments of Chaplains of the Church of England and the Church of Scotland to the Indian Ecclesiastical establishments are normally made, on the occurrence of vacancies by the Secretary of State for India from amongst candidates nominated by the Indian Chaplaincies Board of the Church of England and the General Assembly's Committee on Indian Churches respectively Church of England candidates must be between 27 and 34 years

* The rates of pay quoted are subject to revision and will in any case up to March 31 1933 be subject to a maximum reduction of 10 per cent on account of the financial emergency at present existing in India

of age and Church of Scotland candidates must be under 34 years of age On appointment chaplains receive a salary of Rs 600 per month rising by annual increments to Rs 1 050 per month, plus overseas pay of £30 a month *

Indian Railway Service of Engineers —The Secretary of State in Council from time to time makes a number of appointments of Asst Executive Engineers on Indian State Railways In making these appointments he acts with the advice of a Selection Committee Application forms can be obtained from the Secretary Services and General Dept, India Office Whitehall, London Every candidate must have attained the age of 21 and not attained the age of 25 on Jan 1 of the year in which the examination is held Candidates must produce evidence that they have obtained one of the University degrees or passed one of the examinations specified in the Regulations and must have had at least one full year's practical experience of civil engineering Those whose qualifying diploma has been obtained without a college course must have had a full three years of such practical experience Every candidate must be a British subject of non Asiatic domicile All selected candidates are on probation in the first instance on an initial pay (including overseas pay) of Rs 525 a month and are required to execute agreements for three years at the end of which period, if they have given satisfaction their services are retained The pay rises by increments to Rs 1 025 in the 9th year and to Rs 1 675 in the 24th year of service, with possibilities of promotion to higher posts *

Indian Forest Service —Recruitment for this Service is at present suspended, and it is not known whether or under what conditions it is likely to be resumed In Bombay and Burma the Forest Service is under the control of the Local Government by whom appointments are made Any recruitment of candidates from Europe is undertaken by the High Commissioner for India India House Aldwych London W C 2, to whose offices enquiries should be addressed

Further information regarding these and other Indian appointments can be obtained on application, from the Services and General Department India Office Whitehall London, S W 1 Pay Leave and Pension Regulations of the Indian Services are contained in the Civil Service Regulations and other Statutory Rules which can be consulted at the India Office

* The rates of pay quoted are subject to revision and will in any case up to March 31 1933 be subject to a maximum reduction of 10 per cent on account of the financial emergency at present existing in India

THE FINANCES OF INDIA (CENTRAL GOVERNMENT AND PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS) FOR THE YEAR ENDED MARCH 31, 1931

(In lakhs of rupees)*

Separation of Central and Provincial Finances

The Government of India Act 1919 was designed inter alia to secure a greater measure of independence for Provincial Governments and to this end provision was made, in the Act and in Rules subsequently published under authority of the Act for the delimitation of the functions of Government as between the Government of India and the chief Provincial Governments and for the definite assignments to each of these Provincial Governments of specific revenues of their own Effect has been given to these measures of devolution in the ten 'Governor's Provinces viz Bengal, Madras Bombay the United Provinces the Punjab Bihar and Orissa the Central Provinces, Assam Burma, the Province of Coorg and the North West Frontier Province † As regards these provinces the functions of Government have been classified as either 'central subjects or "provincial subjects A general authority to control all matters coming under the latter head, subject to certain expressed provisos is devolved upon the Local Governments concerned

The sources of revenue available to Local Governments for the purpose of defraying their administrative charges consist, in the main, of the receipts from those provincial subjects which are revenue producing, the principal heads being Land Revenue, Irrigation, Stamp Duties and Excise In addition, a local Government is given a small share in any expansion of Income Tax (otherwise a 'central source of revenue) that may be due to an increase of the total assessed incomes within the Province over that of 1920–21

When the division of the sources of revenue was made between the Central and Provincial Governments, it was realized that the Central Government would be left insufficiently provided It was therefore arranged that an annual contribution should be made by eight of the local Governments to the Central Government The annual contributions fixed at the outset aggregated 983 lakhs of rupees They were not except in case of emergency and with the sanction of the Secretary of State to be subject to increase and should reduction of the aggregate be found possible reductions were to be made in fixed proportions from the quotas of the several Provinces The general policy pursued has involved a progressive reduction of the provincial contributions with a view to their ultimate cessation The Budget for 1928 29 provided for the remission of those portions of the contributions which had not been permanently remitted at the close of the previous year

The revised financial arrangements outlined above came into force from April 1, 1921 as from that date all 'provincial revenue and expenditure ceased to be included in the estimates and accounts of the Central Government In the case of Coorg the separation was made on April 1 1924

* A lakh = Rs 100 000 (See p 747 for the Indian system of notation)

† See p 733 as to the financial arrangements sanctioned on the constitution of the North West Frontier Province as a Governor's Province

INDIAN SYSTEM OF NOTATION.—The Indian numerical notation system differs from the European. Large numbers are punctuated as crores and lakhs and not in hundreds thousands and millions. A lakh is one hundred thousand (written out as 1 00 000) and a crore is one hundred lakhs or ten millions (1 00 00 000). Thus 1,68 00 000 is read as 1 crore 68 lakhs. A lakh of rupees (Rs 1 00 000) may be read as equal to £7 500 at 13⅓ rupees—the statutory rate adopted for conversion in this article. The rupee is divided into 16 annas and at 13⅓ rupees to £1 the anna is equivalent to 1⅛*d*. The anna is sub divided into 12 pies (1/12 d approximate value).

NET REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE OF THE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT

The figures of Gross Revenue given above include the net receipts of railways and other commercial undertakings without any deduction on account of interest charges the total receipts from the sale of opium and the receipts of certain spending departments while the figures of Gross Expenditure include the interest charges of commercial undertakings and the cost of cultivation and manufacture of opium. This method of compiling the figures causes the revenue available for administrative purposes and the expenditure on such purposes to appear greater than they really are. A statement of the net revenue and expenditure of the Central Government for 1929 30 is therefore given in the table below which shows the net revenue derived from commercial undertakings after deducting all expenditure including interest charges similar adjustments being made under other heads of revenue and expenditure by deducting (1) the cost of cultivation and manufacture of opium from sale receipts and (2) the receipts of the spending departments from the gross expenditure incurred by them. The cost of the establishments maintained for the collection of revenue is not shown as a deduction from revenue but as a separate head of expenditure.

STATES OF THE RULING PRINCES AND CHIEFS OF INDIA.

THE States in India whose chiefs are in subordinate alliance with, or under the suzerainty of, the King Emperor, comprise about two fifths of the area but only two ninths of the population of India Their administration, with a few unimportant exceptions, is not under the direct control of British officials, but it is subject in varying degrees, to the Supreme Government The chiefs are entitled to British protection, but have no power of making war and peace, or of sending ambassadors to one another or to foreign States., the military force they maintain is strictly limited, no European is allowed to reside at any of their courts without special sanction, and in case of misrule the Supreme Government can dethrone the chief or temporarily suspend him from the exercise of his powers In matters of Imperial interest, trade, main lines of railway, &c, the Supreme Government has jurisdiction Some States pay tribute, most do not Tributes aggregating £475,900 (£91,875 from Mysore) were paid to the Government of India in 1930-31 Generally speaking, the States are governed by their Princes, Ministers, and Councils, with the advice of a political officer of the Supreme Government. This officer may have charge, as British Resident, of one large State, or may be the Agent for a group of States A common characteristic of all Indian States, important or insignificant, is that in their territory British Indian law does not run. For them the Indian Legislature or the Provincial

Legislative Councils cannot legislate, and over them the High Courts or Chief Courts of the Provinces have no jurisdiction

The Assigned Districts of Mysore (Bangalore), Kalat (Quetta) and Berar are still technically Indian States territory The Shan States, on the other hand, are technically part of British India, though administered by local Sawbwas or petty chiefs Excluding these territories, the Indian States have a combined area of 711 032 square miles and a population of 81,310 845 They maintain in the aggregate a considerable body of troops of inferior military organisation in addition to their Indian State forces Many treaties provide that States shall furnish troops on the requisition of the Supreme Government, and troops of Indian States served in almost every Indian campaign of the 19th century Lord Curzon inaugurated an Imperial Cadet Corps of Indian princes and nobles The States vary greatly in size and importance Hyderabad is nearly as large as Great Britain, and the Nizam enjoys a very large revenue On the other hand, in Kathiawar and elsewhere, where family custom has led to minute sub division there are many chiefs of single villages In these petty estates the nominal chief may have some very limited magisterial powers, but the administration is regulated and carried on by the Supreme Government in its executive capacity The amount of control thus exercised over an Indian State in its internal affairs depends on a number of considerations, and varies from State to State. The rulers have not necessarily any religious or tribal connexion with the majority of their subjects Thus the Nizam of Hyderabad is a Muhammadan, but most of his people are Hindus. Although the Indian States, large and small, number 662, only about 200 are of any real importance The majority represent the scattered military chiefships which sprang from the ruins of the Moghul Empire in the 18th century The rulers of Gwalior, Indore, and Baroda are all descendants of successful generals who then rose to power Most of these States are of more recent origin than the British power in India A unique step was taken in 1910, when a new Indian State was created out of the family domains of the Maharaja of Benares

The salutes enjoyed by the Indian princes indicate their relative importance Those with eleven guns or more are addressed as His Highness. On pages 753 754 are the names of 86 ruling chiefs who have salutes of eleven guns or more, with some particulars of their States Some well known Indians of title, such as H H the Aga Khan, GCSI GCIE, GCVO, and the Maharajah of Burdwan, GCIE, KCSI, are not ruling chiefs

The States of Hyderabad, Mysore, Baroda, Kashmir, Sikkim, and Kalat, and those belonging to the Rajputana and Central India Agencies, 175 in all, are under the direct supervision of the Governor-General in Council. The remainder, chiefly minor States, are under the supervision or control of various Provincial Governments The States of first magnitude, which have a superior Resident, are Hyderabad, Mysore, Baroda, Kashmir, Jaipur, Udaipur, and Gwalior.

The Indian States may be thus classified — 1 Hyderabad, the premier State in India (capital, Hyderabad, pop. 466,894—the fifth city in India). This State is in the centre of the Deccan or central plateau of Southern India. The ruling dynasty is of Turkoman origin, and is descended from Asaf Jah, who became Viceroy of the Deccan in 1712, and then independent of the Mogul Emperor Telugu and Marathi are the chief languages Wheat, rice, and cotton are produced The Nizam's Guaranteed Railway is the principal line 2 Mysore This State, situated on a plateau in Southern India, was administered by the Indian Government from 1831 to 1881, when it was restored to native rule, under a somewhat strictly framed instrument of transfer In Dec 1913, the instrument was replaced by a new Treaty putting the relations between the British Government and the State on a footing more in consonance with the actual position of the Maharaja among the Feudatory Chiefs of India Kanarese and Telugu are the chief languages There is a Mysore State Railway Millets, pulses, and rice are the principal crops Mysore has important goldfields 3. Baroda, situated in Western India in Gujarat and Kathiawar and much interlaced with British districts The reigning Gaekwar was the adopted heir of the ruler deposed in 1875 for misgovernment and misconduct 4. The Himalayan Hill States, west of Nepal, including Kashmir The important frontier State of Kashmir (capital, Srinagar, pop 173,573) was granted to Ghulab Sing by Lord Hardinge, after the First Punjab War (1846) It comprises Jammu, Kashmir, Ladakh, Gilgit, and Baltistan. A force stationed at Gilgit watches the northern passes and controls the feudatory chiefships of Hunza and Nagar while on the west the subordinate chiefship of Chitral is occupied by British troops depending for their support on the Peshawar border 5 Sikkim, a frontier State situated on the borders of Tibet, between Nepal and Bhutan, acknowledged the British protectorate in 1890, when also the boundaries of Tibet were defined by the Sikkim Tibet Convention 6 The Sikh States, in the Sirhind plain, south of the Sutlej The most important of these is Patiala 7 Rajputana, comprising the ancient sovereignties lying between Sind and the United Provinces Rajputana (pop 11 225 712) extends some 460 miles from north to south and is 530 miles in breadth, and is larger than the British Isles About half of the area is desert It comprises 20 States of varying size and importance. Of these 17 are ruled by hereditary Rajput chiefs, two by Jat chiefs, and one by a Muhammadan. The Governor General's Agent's headquarters are at Ajmer, he has under him Residents for Eastern and Western Rajputana, and about twenty other officers distributed among the States to supervise the administration and give advice when it is required The most important States are Jodhpur (Marwar), Udaipur (Mewar), and Jaipur The Rajput dynasties, the most ancient in India, go back before the Mogul Empire and resemble feudal monarchies. 8 The States of Central India, lying to the north of the Nerbudda and to the south and east of Rajputana, although in the aggregate one third less in extent than those of Rajputana, are nearly four times as numerous All but 17 are petty chiefships The most important are Gwalior and Indore, which include between them one half of the whole area. The 31 minor States of Bundelkhand (largest, Rewa) are in political relation with the Central India Agency Bhopal, one of the principal Muhammadan States in India. 9. The Malayalim States of Travancore and

Cochin, lying together in S W India These important States attached to Madras Presidency represent ancient Hindu dynasties 10 The three northern Muhammadan States of Khairpur (Sind), Bahawalpur and Rampur 11 Kalat (including Makran and Kharan) and Las Bela with tribal areas in the possession of the Marri and Bugti tribes 12 Gujarat including Kutch and the numerous petty chiefships of Kathiawar 13 The Southern Mahratta States 14 The numerous Afghan and Baluch tribes of the N W frontier inhabiting the mountains from the north of Peshawar to the base of the Suleiman range a distance of 800 miles The names of some of these tribes Wazirs Orakzais Afridis &c have become familiar owing to the many expeditions against them 15 The aboriginal Gond and Kol tribes under petty princes of aboriginal or Rajput blood in Chota Nagpur Orissa the Central Provinces and the Jaipur (Vizagapatam) Agency 16 The Indo Chinese group of States and the numerous hill tribes of the N E frontier

ASIATIC RUSSIA —A portion of what was once the Russian Empire is conterminous with Persia and Afghanistan The Trans Caspian Railway runs to Merv to Samarkand and Andijan with a branch to Tashkent The Murghab Valley branch from Merv to Kushk on the Afghan frontier opened in 1898 brings the Russian railways within 70 miles of Herat and within 450 miles of the Chaman terminus of the Indian railways Another important strategic line connects Tashkent directly with Orenburg The Amu Darya or Oxus which separates Bokhara from Afghanistan for 330 miles is navigated by Russian steamers

CHINA —India is in contact with two dependencies of China Chinese Turkestan and Tibet and one province Yunnan

Chinese Turkestan is surrounded by the mountains of Transhan the Pamirs and Kuenlun There are three difficult passes into Russian Turkestan and two still more difficult ones into India The boundary between Kashmir and Chinese Turkestan has not been officially defined There is a British consul general at Kashgar Trade with India is chiefly carried over the Karakoram Pass (18 500 feet) via Ladakh in Kashmir

Tibet a plateau seldom lower than 10 000 feet forms the northern frontier of India (boundary imperfectly defined) from Kashmir to Burma but is separated therefrom by the Himalayas India imports from Tibet wool borax salt and musk in exchange for cotton and woollen goods and grain Trade passes from Bengal (through Sikkim) and from the Punjab and the United Provinces Under the Anglo Chinese Sikkim Convention of 1890 a trade mart was opened at Yatung but as the Tibetans persistently disregarded the Convention a political mission was despatched from India with a military escort It reached the capital Lhasa after sharp fighting on August 3 1904 A new Convention was signed (Sept 7) providing for the erection of boundary pillars between Sikkim and Tibet for three trade marts with British and Tibetan agents for unrestricted traffic by existing routes and for payment of an indemnity The Tibetans pledged themselves not to alienate any territory or grant concessions to or permit the intervention of any foreign Power By the Convention of Peking (April, 1906) China accepted the Conventions of 1890 and 1904 and declared that no foreign State should interfere in Tibet, while England also undertook not to interfere in the administration of Tibet or annex territory By the Anglo Russian Convention of Aug 1907 both Powers recognised the suzerain rights of China in Tibet agreed to maintain its territorial integrity to refrain from intervention in its internal administration to treat with Tibet only through the Chinese Government, not to send representatives to Lhasa not to assign any territory to either Power and not to obtain railway mining, or other concessions but direct relations between British commercial agents and Tibetan authorities under the Conventions of 1904 and 1906 are permitted In Dec 1905 the ruler of Tibet the Tashi Lama visited India The Dalai Lama who fled before the British advance on Lhasa returned to Tibet in Jan, 1910 The Chinese had meanwhile strengthened their hold over the administration, despite the opposition of the Lamas or monks who resented the loss of their authority In Feb 1910 the Dalai Lama again fled to India pursued by Chinese troops He was then deposed by the Chinese Emperor The British Government refused the Dalai Lama's appeal for their intervention but allowed him to remain at Darjiling He left India in June 1912 for Lhasa where sharp fighting occurred between the Chinese and Tibetans, the former being worsted In August 1912 the British Minister at Peking presented a Note to the Chinese Government urging that China should not actively intervene in internal administration in Tibet To this the Chinese Government agreed and representatives of the British Chinese and Tibetan Governments met in conference at Simla in Oct 1913 to discuss the relations between the three countries A convention the terms of which have not been made public, was initialled by the three representatives but the Chinese Government have so far refused to ratify it

Yunnan is a Chinese province to the N E of Burma By Anglo Chinese agreements of 1894 and 1897 a boundary was fixed between Burma and Yunnan and arrangements were made regarding trade extradition &c Part of the boundary is still undefined By an agreement of 1896 Great Britain and France agreed to share equally all privileges or advantages that might be conceded by China in Yunnan Trade with Yunnan is chiefly by a difficult route from Bhamo, in Upper Burma Burma imports from Yunnan hides raw silk, &c and exports cotton goods &c Tengyueh and Ssumao, near the Burma frontier, are treaty ports There are British consuls at Tengyueh and Yunnan fu

SIAM (q v) marches with Burma for many hundreds of miles through mountainous country, and considerable trade is carried on over this frontier mainly with Chiengmai Burma imports from Siam teak, cattle silk goods, &c, and exports cotton goods &c The boundary of Burma and N W Siam was demarcated in 1892–3 France in 1904 recognised the portion of Siam west of the Menam basin including the Malay peninsula and adjacent islands as within the British sphere of influence

Canada was originally discovered by Cabot in 1497, but its history dates only from 1534, when the French took possession of the country. The first permanent settlement at Port Royal (now Annapolis), Nova Scotia, was founded in 1605, and Quebec was founded in 1608. In 1759 Quebec succumbed to the British forces under General Wolfe, in 1763 the whole territory of Canada became a possession of Great Britain by the Treaty of Paris of that year. Nova Scotia was ceded in 1713 by the Treaty of Utrecht, the Provinces of New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island being subsequently formed out of it. British Columbia was formed into a Crown colony in 1858, having previously been a part of the Hudson Bay Territory, and was united to Vancouver Island in 1866. By the British North America Act, passed in 1867, the Provinces of Canada (Ontario and Quebec), Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick were united under the title of THE DOMINION OF CANADA, and provision was made in the Act for the admission at any subsequent period of the other provinces and territories of British North America.

The Dominion of Canada occupies the whole of the northern part of the North American Continent (with the exception of Alaska and part of the coast of Labrador), from 49° North latitude to the North Pole, and from the Pacific to the Atlantic Ocean. In Eastern Canada, the southernmost point is Middle Island in Lake Erie, at 41° 41′ (approximately the latitude of Rome, Italy).

Relief.—From a physical point of view Canada may be divided into an eastern division, a western division, the Red River Valley, in long. 97°, forming the separating line, and a northern division. The eastern division comprises two areas, presenting radically distinct aspects:—(1) The south-eastern area, bounded by the line of the Gulf and River St. Lawrence, from Belle Isle to Montreal, thence by a line running directly south to Lake Champlain, which is generally hilly, and sometimes mountainous, with many fine stretches of agricultural and pastoral lands. (2) The southern and western area, presenting, in the main, a broad, level, and slightly undulating expanse of generally fertile country, with occasional step-like ridges or rocky escarpments. The main hydrographical feature is the chain of lakes, with an area of 95,000 square miles, contributing to the great river system of the St. Lawrence. The northern division, embracing nearly two-thirds of the Dominion, with an average elevation of 1,000 feet above the level of the sea, is pre-eminently a region of waterways, and including the great Laurentian plateau. In this area are found the other great river systems, the Nelson and the Mackenzie. The western division referred to may also be said to possess two areas equally distinct in character. The first stretches from the Red River Valley to the Rocky Mountains. Here, between lat. 49° and 54°, is the great Prairie Region, rising to the west in three terrace-like elevations, the lowest of which is 700 feet, and the third about 3,000 feet above the level of the sea. North of the 54th parallel the country passes again into forest. The second area, from the western edge of the Prairie to the Pacific coast, is a distance of 400 miles, and contains the Rocky Mountains (Mount Robson, 12,972 feet) and the Selkirk and Cascade Ranges, whose summits are from 4,000 to 16,000 feet high, the country being on the whole densely wooded. The highest mountain peaks in Canada are Mount Logan, 19,850 feet, and Mount St. Elias, 18,008 feet, both in the Yukon.

Climate.—The climate in the eastern and central portions of the Dominion presents greater extremes of cold and heat than in corresponding latitudes in Europe, but in the south-western portion of the Prairie Region and the southern portions of the Pacific slope the climate is milder. Spring, summer, and autumn are of about seven to eight months' duration, and the winter four to five months. The soil is generally fertile and all the products of the temperate zone are cultivated.
